70,000 Await Opening of Series in N. Y. Today

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, Oct. 4.—Little old New York and its eight million were caught up in baseball fever tonight, with the Yankees and Dodgers poised for the morrow's battle of the buroughs in a World Series setting.

The frenzy for tickets, aggravated by the eleventh-hour doubt that either team would be in the series, sent scalpers' prices as high as $50 for one of the 70,000 seats in Yankee Stadium.

In Brooklyn, the tizzy was heightened tonight by the uncertainty over Manager Burt Shotton's pitching choice against the Yankees' Allie Reynolds in the series opener.

Shotton Mum on Choice

Shotton, as was his routine in the 1947 series against the Yankees, brushed off all queries with "no announcement of our pitcher until just before game time."

Manager Casey Stengel of the Yankees, commenting that there was no need to play it cozy, announced this afternoon that the right-handed Reynolds (17-6) would start for the Yankees.

Brooklyn is expected to start either Don Newcombe, husky rookie sensation with his right-handed fast ball, or Elwin (Preacher) Roe, winner of many a crucial late-season game.

Newcombe whose 17 wins and 8 losses, the best record on the Bums' staff, was achieved despite the fact he was not brought up from Montreal until a month after the season started, is reported to be Shotton's choice.

"Newcombe's pitching isn't the only factor that will sway Shotton," said one Brooklyn source. "Newcombe is a good left-handed hitter and Shotton would want him in the game in which the Yanks are using right-handed pitching."

Favored to Take Series

The Yankees have been installed as favorites to take today's game, no matter who the pitching choices, and 8½ to 5 favorites to win the series in best four out of seven games.

This is the year when Brooklyn is envisioning its first World Series champions. In four former World Series attempts, the Dodgers have

Caller Drives Up In Fire Engine; Then Things Hum

There it was, a shiny new fire engine primed for action, sitting placidly in the 400 block of 36th st. ne.

Where's the fire? folk wanted to know.

So did the police, and, in fact, so did the Fire Department.

It turned out there wasn't any fire and the Fire Department said there weren't any of its wagons supposed to be out there at all.

A house-to-house check by the Fourteenth Precinct police soon put out the flame of curiosity.

Hugh Whitlow, 33, it turned out, was just delivering the wagon to the Stratford (Conn.) Fire Department for a Roanoke, Va., firm, and was stopping over with friends at 413 36th st. ne.

A Case For Solomon

Foster Child Taken From Her by Court, Mother Hands Two of Own to D. C. Home

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

At about 12:30 p. m. yesterday the Littles walked into Child Welfare Division headquarters of the Public Welfare Department with three children.

Mrs. Geraldine Little kissed the three children, then turned to her husband, Floyd, and they left the building without a word.

This act set in motion the most unusual case within the memory of Welfare Department workers:

A mother determinedly giving up two of her own children—Edith Christine Hernandez, 15, Mrs. Little's child by a former marriage, and David Gregory Little, 3, her son by Floyd Little, Capital Transit employe—because a third child—Jonathon— a foster child—was being taken from her by court order. The family lives at 1315 10th st. nw.

On Monday, Judge T. Alan Goldsborough decreed that Mrs. Geraldine Little must surrender—by noon Tuesday—3-year-old Jonathon to the Board of Public Welfare. As an alternative, Mrs. Little could turn Jonathon over to his natural mother, Mrs. Mary Miller of Landover, Md., who is now working in Washington as a waitress.

Mrs. Miller claims the child has been kept from her by Mrs. Little since shortly after his birth. She could not be reached for comment last night.

Judge Goldsborough, who has been considering the custody case for a month, Monday brought all parties into court. He told Mrs. Little that he did not consider her a "fit person" to care for young Jonathan. He ordered the transfer pending disposition of the custody case.

"If I'm not a fit mother for one of them, I'm not a fit mother for all of them," Mrs. Little yesterday told a reporter for The Washington Post.

She said she considered her action in turning all her children over to the Welfare Department

New Coal Strike Offensive By Lewis Indicated for Today

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

All was quiet on the steel strike front yesterday, but there were indications that John L. Lewis might take a new offensive in the coal tieup today.

The boss of the United Mine Workers is to make a personal appearance today at White Sulphur Springs, Va., where he is expected to outline for the first time specifically what he wants to settle the 16-day walkout of his soft coal miners.

Some observers here placed special significance on Lewis' plan to appear in person today at the mountain resort town for a renewal of contract talks with the representatives of the Northern and Western mine owners, and of the "captive" mines owned and operated by the steel corporations.

A hint that something new was in the offing also came from Bluefield, W. Va., yesterday. There John Owens, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, met with the representatives of the Southern Coal Producers Association. After a two-hour conference, Owens rushed off to White Sulphur Springs to talk with Lewis.

Meanwhile, violence again flared in the mine field. A dynamite explosion damaged the tipple operated by C. V. Fink and his son near Clearfield, Pa. Several trucks carrying coal from non-union mines were dumped near Hollidaysburg, Pa., and police arrested three men.

Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia, ordered police to give him a full report on the death of Johnnie Compton, 26, of Tookland, who was killed Monday by a large rock falling off a cliff onto his truck near Grundy. Compton had been haul-

Coal Miners Involved in Virginia Melee

St. Charles, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—Approximately 50 persons were involved in a disturbance at a railroad crossing here tonight in which union and nonunion miners clashed.

One man was injured in the melee about 8 p. m., and St. Charles Police Chief William Fritt reported that State police had taken about "seven carloads" of people into custody.

(Lee County Sheriff W. P. Bays said at Jonesville about 10:45 p. m. that State police had just delivered a "large number of men" to the county jail there.

("I do not know what the charges are," Bays said. "The thing it too involved to mention specific charges at this hour.")

Injured during the disturbance was Robert Lawson, 20, a truck driver. He was not hurt seriously, according to reports.

The disturbance started when approximately 50 people stopped a truck driven by Lawson, who was hauling coal for a mine near St. Charles owned by Ridge Wacks.

Spokesmen for the crowd cautioned Lawson not to proceed to the mine. A disturbance developed and Lawson was knocked to the sidewalk.

Truman Gets Look at Secret Weapons

Fort Bragg, N. C., Oct. 4 (U.P.).—President Truman today got a first-hand look at secret weapons and new combat techniques of the Army field forces, and came away "impressed."

He flew here from Washington in an Air Force Constellation plane, arriving at 9:57 a. m., and spent the day watching the crack Eighty-second Airborne Division do its stuff.

(He returned to the Capital at 5:19 p. m. EST.)

As an artillery battery commander in World War I, Mr. Truman was particularly impressed by a demonstration of a secret radar device for aiming artillery fire.

Mr. Truman was accompanied by Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff. He was welcomed to this sprawling 127,664-acre Army base by Gen. Mark Clark, Chief of the Army Field Forces, Lieut. Gen John R. Hodge, base commander, and Gen. Alvin C. Gillem, jr., commander of the Third Army.

Navy Orders Leak Probe; Hearing Won

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, last night ordered an official investigation—with the court-martial of those responsible in view—of the "leaking" of confidential communications criticizing current Pentagon defense policies.

At the same time, however, Navy critics of those policies won their major, immediate objective—a full-dress congressional hearing of their complaints.

The House Armed Services Committee—partly spurred by publication of the top level protest against unification and Department of Defense actions—mapped plans to go ahead with such a probe next week.

Thus, top admirals who believe that the national security is endangered by too great emphasis on strategic air power and the slighting of sea power and naval aviation will have "their day in court."

High Command Called "Packed"

They contend the high command at the Pentagon is "packed" with Army and Air Force officers having "landlocked" views. Most of the "incidents" of the past six months—Cedric Worth's anonymous document and Capt. John G. Crommelin's outburst, for example—sprang from the desire of some Navy partisans for a congressional investigation.

Pentagon chiefs have tried to head off such a Capitol Hill probe, on the ground that questions of military strategy should be decided by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The policy subcommittee of the House Armed Services Committee yesterday decided to hear Admiral Denfeld and other top Navy chiefs on the charges that naval morale has been shattered and national defense imperiled by what has been going on.

In announcing the investigation into how the critical "confidential" documents came to be published, the chief of naval operations said one of the Navy's "cardinal regulations" had been broken.

Denfeld, who was one of three admirals whose views were set forth in the "leaked" documents, last night elaborated on what he had said.

Did Not Approve Bogan's Views

In a statement announcing the investigation, he declared that in forwarding a letter from Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan, commander of the First Task Fleet in the Pacific, to Navy Secretary Francis Matthews, he did not express approval of Bogan's criticism.

The confidential document handed surreptitiously to newsmen Monday contained Bogan's caustic letter and the forwarding "endorsements" of Denfeld and Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Pacific Fleet commander.

Both forwarding letters "specifically did not concur in the views Vice Admiral Bogan expressed," Denfeld declared. He added that unification of the armed forces is the law of the land and is "wholeheartedly" supported by himself and "a large majority of naval personnel."

The Chief of Naval Operations also noted that he and Radford were required to put "forwarding endorsements" on any letter sent through official channels. "Such

Olds Unanimously Rejected By Senate Subcommittee

By the United Press

A seven-man Senate subcommittee yesterday voted unanimously against Leland Olds for another term on the Federal Power Commission despite an urgent plea for approval by President Truman.

The President's plea later was read to the Senate but critics of Olds believe the subcommittee rebuff will lead to eventual rejection of his nomination.

The vote against Olds was cast by a Commerce subcommittee after long hearings on his past and present political philosophies. Attacked as a friend of communism and a foe of free enterprise, he also was defended as an old-fashioned "Liberal."

Olds has been a member of the five-man power commission since 1939 and was nominated for a third five-year term last summer.

Mr. Truman recommended approval in a letter to Committee Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.). He said Olds in his 10 years on the commission has proved himself "a champion of fair regulation" and the opposition comes from "powerful corporations" which object to such regulation.

Johnson wrote in his formal reply that the subcommittee "read and reread and thoroughly discussed" the President's letter today before it voted to turn him down.

"Most members of the committee are reluctant to oppose a presidential nomination," he said.

Johnson enclosed six excerpts from writings by Olds which he described as "radical views" and added:

"The committee found Mr. Olds glib of tongue and very convincing. Like many crusaders for foreign ideologies, he has an attractive personality and is disarming to a very high degree."

One excerpt was from an Olds article in the Federated Press which appeared in the Daily Worker July 5, 1928. It read:

"To millions of workers slaving throughout the world to provide the tribute enacted by the American dollar empire the Fourth of July will loom as anything but the

Barkley Breaks Tie In Behalf of 90 Pct. Price Supports as Lucas Protests

(Roll Call on Page 8)

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Senate sent the Anderson compromise farm bill back to committee last night, after a day of sensational flip-flops and violent debate on the measure.

In voting to recommit the measure, the Senate instructed the Agriculture Committee to return it with new recommendations within 48 hours.

The vote to recommit had the effect of making ineffective an earlier vote to replace the Anderson provision for supports ranging from 75 to 90 percent of parity with one providing for rigid price supports at 90 percent of parity.

The motion to recommit was put by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.) the bill's author, when it was evident that the Senate was headed toward even more and higher supports. The motion was approved at 9:30 p. m.

The Senate had earlier voted down a similar amendment calling for higher supports and then changed its mind on a motion to reconsider.

The deciding vote on the new motion was cast by Vice President Alben W. Barkley, when a tally showed the amendment to the Anderson bill defeated by a tie of 37 to 37.

In casting his vote, Barkley deserted the majority leader, Scott W. Lucas, and the bill's author, Anderson who was formerly Secretary of Agriculture in President Truman's Cabinet.

Barkley explained his action, before breaking the tie, that he had preached the 90 percent of parity price support all during last year's campaign, and felt committed to it.

His action was followed by an angry outburst by Lucas.

Lucas shouted his tirade for several minutes after Barkley had put the amendment across. He denounced members of both parties who had voted for the change, declaring:

"You've voted to kill all farm legislation."

Lucas also angrily denounced Senate members who voted for the amendment who, he said, had been "constantly talking about economy in Government."

"It is all tommyrot," he declared "to talk about economy and forcing the majority leader to do this and that, and then voting like this."

"I come from the heart of the corn country—the corn and soybean country," he said. "The farmers in my State are not a selfish group."

He declared that the vote would kill the "basic agricultural program laid down by the Democratic Party in 1935."

Evidence of ill feeling between the Vice President and majority leader became even more pronounced after the Senate reconvened at 8 p. m. after an hour's recess for dinner.

Barkley, grim and scowling,

Cripps Warns 'Little Fellow' Of Inflation

London, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Chancellor of Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps warned Britain tonight that inflation is ahead, and the "little fellow" will bear the brunt of it.

"The cost of living will rise" as the result of devaluation of the pound, he said, and he made it clear that the average Briton will eat less, buy less and get no raise in pay.

Cripps made the announcement as part of the financial report for the quarter ending September 30, at the Lord Mayor's dinner for the bankers and merchants of the City of London.

The heavy burden of devaluation, he said, "will fall almost entirely upon the wageearner, and will be felt most heavily by those with the lowest incomes."

Cripps also revealed that Britain's dollar and gold reserves dwindled to the lowest figure on record before the pound was devalued on September 18.

He said they dropped to a danger level of 330 million pounds ($1,329,900,000) by devaluation time, constituting a "state of affairs which could not have been tolerated longer." After the devaluation they increased as a result of money reaching Britain.

He admitted bluntly that devaluation would mean inflation. He reiterated his demand for higher profits taxes, wage freezes, despite increased living costs, no reductions in defense and social expenses, and none in capital investments such as housing.

713 Yugoslav Cominformists Win Amnesty

Belgrade, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—Premier Marshal Tito released from prison today 713 Yugoslavs who were jailed because they sided with the Soviet Union against him in his struggle with the Cominform.

In addition, 224 students who were removed from Belgrade University and placed in industrial enterprises because they allegedly had tried to "sabotage" the regime, made a gesture of repentance.

The large-scale amnesty came at a time when Marshal Tito is making gestures calculated to unite Yugoslavia behind him.

The amnestied prisoners sent a telegram to Marshal Tito saying they were morally and politically reeducated, and the Soviet Union was behaving toward Yugoslavia in an "anti-Communist" way. They said Tito's policy showed "genius" and sent their love to the UDBA (the Yugoslav secret police), and to Alexander Rankovich, Minister of Interior, who signed the amnesty decree. They vowed "pitilessly to destroy" other Cominform sympathizers.

The students, in their telegram to authorities, said the UDBA prevented them from organizing an underground sabotage activity against Tito, and thanked him for "forgiving" them by giving them light punishment.

Borba, Communist Party organ, said in August that 1416 Cominformists—including the 224 students—were in jail or undergoing some other form of punishment.

Minton Confirmed by Senate For Supreme Court Justice

By The Associated Press

The Senate last night confirmed the nomination of Federal Judge Sherman Minton to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

It did so after rejecting by a 45-to-21 vote a demand by several Republican Senators that Minton be summoned for questioning by the Judiciary Committee. He had expressed reluctance to testify, saying he did not think such an appearance would be proper.

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) made a motion that Minton's nomination be sent back to the committee, which approved it 9 to 2 on Monday. He said the Senate should insist that Minton be questioned.

Senators Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Donnell (R., Mo.) supported Morse.

Confirmation came by a 48-to-16 vote after Senator Lucas (D., Ill.), the Democratic leader, had told his colleagues Minton will serve his country well on the high bench.

"You can't judge a man by what he does in the United State Senate so far as his judicial character is concerned," Lucas said.

He added that "nothing good" could come from cross-examination of Minton by the committee. Lucas said it would be "absurd" to require his appearance.

But Donnell said he does not think "that sufficient information has been made available to me."

President Truman named Minton to fill the vacancy created by the death of Justice Wiley B. Rutledge.

D. C. Acts to Shear Off Front Of Estates on Foxhall Road

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District government yesterday ordered the start of condemnation proceedings against the owners of expensive estates along Foxhall rd. from Reservoir rd. to Whitehaven pkwy. nw.

Acting Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox said the move will shear off stretches of as much as 60 feet from the lawns of the highly valued residences.

The action was taken at the Commissioners' regular semiweekly closed meeting and the decision was not made public.

A small part of the land acquired will be used for the straightening and widening of Foxhall rd., recently the scene of several accidents, but the remainder will remain off the tax rolls and in the owners' lawns, Colonel Cox said.

The reason for this paradoxical situation is that the Approved Highway Plan of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission calls for a 120-foot right of way on Foxhall rd. and the Commission has declined to reduce this to 90 feet as requested by the District Highway Department, Colonel Cox explained.

The Park and Planning Commission originally planned for the development of Foxhall rd. as an expressway carrying Northwest section traffic to and from the downtown area, but the Highway Department and Congress approved development of the Arizona Ave. Freeway the same area, instead.

Now the need for improving the stretch has arisen and the city must purchase 20 feet, "which is

Truman Renews T-H Repeal Pledge

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 4 (AP).—The Truman Administration today renewed its pledge to repeal the Taft-Hartley law.

President Truman said in a message to the American Federation of Labor convention that Taft-Hartley repeal is a matter of "unfinished business" with his Administration and that it will be carried out eventually to the "satisfaction of working men and women."

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin told the convention in a personal appearance that repeal will come "in 1951 if not in 1950."

He said that if the Democrats win the New York senatorial election, the Governor's race in New Jersey and a special congressional election in San Francisco—all to be held in the next month or so—the Truman forces in Congress may make a 1950 repeal effort.

"Victories in those elections could bring about a change in sentiment in Congress and lead to a new try next year for Taft-Hartley repeal, possibly a successful one," Tobin told newsmen.

Tobin said that other than failure to carry out Taft-Hartley repeal the Administration was clearing a substantial part of the Truman Fair Deal program through Congress this year.

President Truman's message to the AFL delegates said the welfare "needs" of the American people can be satisfied "through the cooperation of wage earners and farmers with their government."

The point of farmer-labor unity had been stressed earlier to the convention by both Secretary Tobin and Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.). They had called for farmer-labor political cooperation to put over common aims.

President Truman's message pledged his "full support in rounding out much needed programs to insure the Fair Deal goal for the benefit of all the people of our Nation."

"This is the cause to which we are dedicated," the President said. "It may be delayed by the tactics of those who live in the dark ages of social thinking and oppose anything to benefit their less privileged fellow man.

"But in the end it will triumph if we stand together and meet the challenge in the best interest of all patriotic American groups."

In another convention development, AFL President William Green assured British fraternal delegates in attendance that the AFL does not share "the reactionary opinion expressed in some quarters in this country" that Britain's recovery troubles are due to her Labor government.

"We are not in accord with that point of view," Green said. "We believe the people of Great Britain should be free to form their government as they see fit so long as it is not totalitarian in form. We claim that same right for ourselves."

In Lilienthal Book

Educated Urged to Serve State

David E. Lilienthal proposes that during the next 30 years all educated men and women qualified to do so take time out from their private careers to serve national, State or local government.

He says that we're probably facing "a generation of almost unrelieved tension" and during that period our public servants must "be something better than political hangers-on or plodding mediocrities."

Calling for a "citizen universal public service" in which qualified private citizens would devote a number of their "best and productive years" to Government legislative or executive service, the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission declares:

"I do not urge that everyone pursue public service, in some form, as a life career. I am inclined to think that the idea of public service as a life-time career has certain severe limitations, judged by present-day public needs.

"What I urge is a fluid kind of citizen-service, in which men and women move from private life into public service for a period of years, and then back to private life.

"Thus there will be an almost ideal situation, as I see it, in this: "On their return to private life, these citizens will be experienced in first-hand knowledge of public affairs and of the special difficulties that beset the public servant; we will have public servants whose judgment will be enriched by recent experience in the day-to-day problems of private affairs."

Lilienthal makes the proposal in a book "This I Do Believe" (Harper & Brothers).

To Lilienthal, "When the books are balanced they will show that democracy is growing in strength; in spite of some ugly danger spots, it seems to me to be flourishing. In all probability we face a generation of almost unrelieved tension. Such a trial will call for steadfastness and faith."

Israeli Cabinet Decrees It's Now Jaffa-Telaviv

Jaffa-Telaviv, Oct. 4 (NYHT.).—The largest Jewish and Arab cities in Palestine were united today by a decree of the Israeli cabinet. Henceforth the capital of Israel will be known as Jaffa-Telaviv.

The Cabinet Act served to ratify a de facto situation—Tel Aviv has absorbed Jaffa, where more than 60,000 Arabs lived during the British mandate regime. Out of deference to Jaffa's antiquity, its name was placed first in the new title.

The Israeli decision represented the first formal acquisition of Arab territory in Palestine since the formation of the new state.

Still Out in Utah

While some 400,000 soft coal miners east of the Mississippi stayed out of the pits, those west of the big river together with the hard coal miners—around 100,000 altogether—went back to work Monday on Lewis' orders. Only 400 of the State's 4000 UMW miners went back to the job; the others remained out in a move to force several nonunion mine-owners to sign up.

The CIO Steelworkers and the big steel companies remained stalemated over insurance and pensions. Some 500,000 steelworkers stayed away from work for a fourth day in a union demand for welfare benefits to be financed solely by the employers.

Some 50,000 railroaders have already been laid off because of the combined coal and steel tie-ups.

Jurors Menaced, Hiss Declares in Asking New Venue

New York, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—A motion to transfer the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss from New York to Vermont was filed in United States District Court here today by Hiss' attorneys. It was backed by affidavits from two of the jurors at the first trial who said they had received threatening letters and telephone calls since they voted for acquittal.

The first trial ended July 8 with a hung jury, eight for conviction and four for acquittal. Hiss is accused of falsely denying that he aided an alleged prewar Communist spy ring.

The motion will be argued at 10:30 a. m. Monday.

The two jurors who said they had been threatened were Mrs. Louise A. Torian and Louis Hill. Mrs. Torian said anonymous letter-writers had called her a traitor and told her to go to Russia, and a telephone caller had said: "We will get you soon and that will be the end of you." Hill said a postcard had advised him to "drop dead or go to Russia."

Truman Sees Secret Weapons

Carolina and members of the North Carolina congressional delegation joined the presidential party at Fort Bragg.

More than 20,000 troops of the Army's Fifth Corps, most of them from the famous Eighty-second Division, passed in review before the Commander in Chief.

Never Saw Better Review

Mr. Truman said he had "never seen a better review."

In an informal speech after luncheon at the officers' mess, he paid the Army an indirect compliment for staying out of current interservice bickering between the Air Force and Navy.

"I hope that when the Navy and Air Force get all their troubles settled, the Army as usual will go along," Mr. Truman said.

His only references to politics were two joking remarks which seemed to be directly contradictory.

When some of the base officers presented him with a collapsible speaking stand, Mr. Truman held it aloft and said:

"You fellows get ready now; this is a great whistle-stop gadget."

Later, however, he seemed to refute that hint that he is eager to get out and "stump" the country again in a political campaign.

In an admiring reference to a small but powerful loudspeaker which the field forces have developed, Mr. Truman said:

"You can hear it wor two miles. Anybody running for office sometimes needs to be heard for two miles. Maybe more. It took 31,700 miles for me to be completely heard (in the 1948 campaign) and I hope I will never have to do that again."

In the same jovial mood, he told the officers that he was frustrated on his last trip to Fort Bragg because he was refused a chance to make a parachute jump while flying with paratroopers.

"The general told me that if I jumped out of that plane he would be courtmartialed as soon as I got to the ground. I thought it wasn't right to have a major general courtmartialed, so I didn't jump."

The Judiciary Committee had sent him a request that he testify in person but Minton sent the group a letter saying such an appearance raised "a serious question of propriety," since he might be questioned about controversial issues which are now, or may be, before the court. The committee then voted to cancel the request and approved his appointment.

Morse told the Senate he would vote for confirmation of Minton if his motion to recommit failed.

"I am satisfied that Judge Minton will live up to the high qualifications and the professional demands of the bench," Morse said.

Ferguson has said he wanted to question Minton about his advocacy of President Roosevelt's ill-fated 1937 plan for reorganizing the Supreme Court by naming additional justices.

He said there is enough in Minton's public record "to indicate serious doubt as to his position on various matters." Such doubt, Ferguson added, could only be resolved by having Minton come before the committee for questioning.

Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.), acting chairman of the committee, replied that most Supreme Court nominees were not questioned by Senate committees. In cases where nominees were queried, he said they weren't previously on the Federal bench. Minton had been a Circuit Court judge for eight years.

Senator Jenner (R., Ind.), absent because of the illness of his father, sent word to the Senate that he favors confirmation of his fellow Indianan.

"There is every indication that he (Minton) has abandoned his radical beliefs," Jenner said in a message read by Senator Saltonstall (R., Mass.).

Guay Poison Effort Alleged

Quebec, Que., Oct. 4 (AP).—Prosecution witnesses testified today J. Albert Guay once sought to poison his wife, and that it was only at his insistence she made the plane trip on which she died with 22 others September 9 in a crash caused by an explosion.

Miss Lucille Levesque, airlines clerk, said Guay insisted that his wife take the plane, although Mrs. Guay protested she did not wish to be away from home overnight.

Miss Levesque was a witness at the preliminary hearing of Guay, 32-year-old jeweler, on a murder charge stemming from what police term a triangle killing with a home-made dynamite bomb. The hearing will be continued Wednesday.

Lucien Carreau, a young leather worker, told the court Guay offered him $500 last April to give the 28-year-old Mrs. Guay some poisoned cherry wine, but he refused. Then, he said, the jeweler offered him $50 keep his mouth shut.

The prosecution, trying to prove that Guay arranged for explosives to be placed aboard the plane, drew from Mrs. Arthur Pitre, 41, the admission that she had bought dynamite at Guay's request. Police describe Guay as Mrs. Pitre's lover.

Mrs. Pitre testified that Guay was in possession of a 27-pound parcel that was delivered by taxi to Quebec Airport and placed aboard the plane shortly before it took off and crashed.

She said she met Guay at Palais Station, September 9, and that he told her "the parcel just arrived." She said the jeweler took her to a parcel locker and got out a parcel a bit bigger than a suit box.

Court adjourned just as she was telling how it was placed in a taxicab for her trip to the airport.

Mrs. Pitre also told of an excursion to a hardware store with another woman to buy 10 pounds of dynamite at Guay's request. She thought it was some time in August. She said she was told by Guay the explosive was to be used to blow up rocks on a farm. She said the dynamite was turned over to Guay the day it was purchased.

Miss Levesque said Guay made the arrangements for his wife's trip.

House Bans Riders To Security Bill

By The Associated Press

Legislation extending Social Security to 11 million more workers won its first test yesterday as the House, against Republican protests of "gag rule," voted 189 to 135 to bar any amendments to the bill.

Then, although procedures permit four days of debate, a bipartisan drive began for a final vote by tonight. Speaker Rayburn said passage is certain.

Some members voiced hope the bill might soften labor's demands for special pension plans financed wholly by employers. In the Federal insurance program the costs are shared equally by workers and their employers.

Would Increase Benefits

Besides expanding old age and survivors insurance coverage, the administration bill would boost benefits by 70 to 80 per cent, create new disability insurance, and treble payroll taxes in the next 20 years to finance the expanded program.

House Republicans, after a morning mass meeting, bitterly fought what they called a "gag" outlawing amendments. Most of them said they want Social Security expansion, but argued that some of the provisions of the measure before the House are dangerous.

Representative Curtis (R., Neb.) shouted that the new disability insurance points toward a "welfare state." Representative Madden (D., Ind.) replied that such arguments were made when the first Social Security Act was passed in 1935.

Substitute Bill Offered

The Republicans offered a substitute bill. It resembles the Administration measure in many respects, but proposes a slower boost in taxes and would delete the proposed new insurance payments for workers who become totally and permanently disabled. They argued that the public assistance program can care for the disabled.

Representative Kean (R., N. J.), author of the GOP bill, said it would put 1,300,000 more persons under old age and survivors insurance than the Administration measure, and ultimately would cost $1,250,000,000 less annually.

Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee made the opening plea for the Administration legislation. He told the House it confronts this question:

"Whether the insurance program of the social security system can be strengthened and reinforced against the assaults of proponents of general old-age pensions out of the Federal Treasury and against the challenge of the private retirement plans financed solely by the employer."

Danger Seen in Private Plans

The Ways and Means Committee said earlier that private pension plans, financed wholly by employers, endanger the Federal program.

Here is what the Administration bill would do:

1. Increase from 35 million to 46 million the number of workers covered by old age and survivors' insurance. Brought into the program would be about 4,500,000 nonfarm self-employed persons, 3,800,000 employes of State and local governments (if these governments want their employes to participate), 750,000 domestic servants, and several smaller groups. Farmers and farm workers would not be covered.

2. Boost benefits by an average of 70 to 80 percent.

3. Establish a new insurance for persons who become totally and permanently disabled.

4. Increase taxes. The payroll tax, now 1 percent against employes' pay and employers' payrolls, would be boosted January 1, 1950, to 1½ percent on each; on January 1, 1951, to 2 percent, in 1960 to 2½ percent, in 1965 to 3 percent, and in 1970 to 3¼ percent. The tax would be collected against the first $3600 of a person's income, compared to present collections against the first $3000.

In money the new taxes would jump social security collections from the present $1,800,000,000 a year to around $2,700,000,000 next year, and to about $3,600,000,000 in 1951.

Opposes 2 Bills

Krug States U. S. Claim To Tidal Oil

Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug urged Congress yesterday to reject two bills which would give the States control over some 100,000,000,000 barrels of oil in marginal seaward lands off the United States and Alaska.

O'Mahoney

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman denounced the two bills as "outrageous." Both men testified before the Senate Interior Committee.

Krug said Federal control of the offshore areas, which extend outward three miles from the low-tide mark, is vital to the national welfare. He said his "strong" opposition to turning over title to the coastal States is shared by President Truman.

To support his view, Krug introduced a letter Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson recently wrote to Committee Chairman Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.).

The letter pointed out that a 1947 Supreme Court decision vested ownership of submerged lands off California in the Federal Government, rather than the State.

Krug recommended approval of two Administration bills to provide for Federal management of the development of natural resources in the marginal sealands.

Prepared by Cabinet Officers

Prepared by the Secretaries of Defense and Interior and the Attorney General, the bills were drafted with "the single purpose of serving the interests of national security and the welfare of the Nation as a whole," he said.

Perlman said the proposals for giving title to the States were backed by "the great oil interests."

In effect, he said, they propose handing over to the coastal States the "oil and other resources . . . and then make the magnanimous" gesture of granting to the United States, in time of war or other period of danger, the first opportunity to buy back its own oil."

Such measures, he continued, have the "blind support" of Governors and States' Attorneys General—"most of whom find it must easier to go along with the few States that would be unduly enriched by a wholesale donation of Federal assets than to find out where the best interests of their States really lie."

One of the Administration bills would grant the States clear title to actual "tidelands"—land covered and uncovered by tides. It would also protect States' equities in wharves, piers, and filled-in land in the marginal sea area.

The other would give the Interior Secretary supervision of development and conservation of all natural resources in the marginal sea and continental shelf—which at some points juts about 250 miles seaward from our coast. It also would forgive "trespasses" made on such land by State or private interests committed before June 23, 1947—the date of the Supreme Court decision.

Kefauver Apologizes for D. C.'s Votelessness to New Citizens

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) apologized to 37 new citizens yesterday for Washington's lack of vote.

The legislator predicted, however, that voting, "the highest privilege of citizenship" will some day come to the people of this city.

Senator Kefauver was the main speaker at naturalization ceremonies held in District Court before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

Kefauver said:

"I am very sorry that if you live in Washington, at least right now, you won't have the opportunity to exercise the highest privilege of citizenship—voting for your officials. Some day you will have that opportunity."

Until the vote comes to the suffrageless city, Kefauver urged the new Americans to discuss issues that are important and formulate decisions. He said that this is especially important now when "The mantle of leadership has passed on to us. If there is going to be any light in the world today, I believe the United States must bring it."

Among those naturalized was Mrs. Marie T. Given, 34, wife of Lieut. Col. William J. Given. She told reporters that she was attached to a Polish government agency in SHAEF in Europe shortly after V-Day when she met Colonel Given on a blind date. They now reside at 3051 Idaho ave. nw.

Women of 'Hill' Turn on Heat For Air-Conditioned Commuter

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A quartet of Senate secretaries yesterday turned on the heat for air-conditioned train rides.

The Capitol Hill women, spearheading a parade of more than 15 witnesses at an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing, contended the B. & O. Railroad is "discriminating" against them by denying air-conditioned coaches on the Washington to Brunswick, Md., line.

The line terminates 49 miles northwest of Washington in Brunswick, with main stops at Rockville, Gaithersburg, Germantown, Boyds and Dickerson.

Case in point, said the Montgomery County residents, is that most of the Washington-to-Baltimore locals let Government workers here glide from air-conditioned offices to air-conditioned homeward trains.

But not so when you live out Brunswick way.

"It's like stepping into a furnace, boarding that 4:50 p.m. train," said Mrs. Helen Kiefer, who works an air-conditioned day as administrative assistant to Senator Wayne Morse (R., Ore.). Mrs. Kiefer lives in Poolesvilleg.

Mrs. Lydia Lee Heflin, on the staff of the Senate "5 percenter" investigating committee, was more specific.

She offered an affidavit of a Barnesville, Md., neighbor who carried a thermometer in her purse on a train trip from Silver Spring to her home.

According to the affidavit, the mercury readings on her trip one day during the week of July 25 were: Silver Spring, 96 degrees; Forest Glen, 100; Kensington, 106; Rockville, 112; Boyd, 106, and Barnesville, 104.

Mrs. Heflin's recorder friend "who wanted to get the facts" boarded the train in Silver Spring at 4:03 p. m. and debarked in Barnesville at 4:51 p. m., the affidavit said.

Miss Galinda E. Baker of Brunswick, a secretary to Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.), added to the complaints: "Even in the winter," she said, "commuters either suffer from too much heat or freeze because there seems to be no way of regulating the heat."

Miss Carolyn Allnutt, who works in the office of Senator Willie Robertson (D., Va.), and rides the Brunswick line from Silver Spring, also registered complaint.

B. & O. officials listened to these and other complaints about "soot-filled" coaches, and then assistant general passenger agent W. M. Snyder laid the railroad's cards on the table

The railroad, he said, is now weather-stripping windows of the cars to eliminate the soot, and as to air conditioning—

Baltimore commuters enjoy air-conditioned coaches because the B. & O. keeps a pool of about 10 air conditioned cars in Washington, Baltimore and other large terminals to put on through service runs when breakdowns occur and for special parties.

"It would be out of the question, however, to shuttle spare A. C. coaches on the Brunswick line," said Snyder, because there are no battery charging facilities for their refrigeration system at the Maryland end of the line.

To install such equipment also is out of the question, he added hastily, since the Brunswick line is losing about $110,000 a year.

East German Regime Begins To Take Form

Berlin, Oct. 4 (NYHT).—Soviet Zone political leaders today officially began negotiations for the formation of a provisional East German regime, which is expected to be proclaimed this weekend.

The decision for the "quickest possible formation of a provisional All-German government" was announced tonight by Wilhelm Pieck, co-chairman of the Communist Party.

He said the Communists would begin immediate conferences with other anti-Fascist groups. Actually, talks between the Communists and their satellite parties, and with Russian authorities, have been going on at an intensive rate since Monday.

The Communist-dominated People's Council will hold an emergency meeting Friday or Saturday, when the new regime probably will be proclaimed. The announced purpose of the meeting is "to take decisive action on the thousands of mass resolutions from all over the Soviet zone that have demanded the immediate constitution of a democratic regime" with its capital in Berlin.

The East German government will be, according to the Communists, the only authority entitled to speak for all Germany. The West German regime, according to the Communists, is illegal, being merely an instrument of Western "imperialism," and having no base in the popular will.

The constitution for an "all-German democratic republic" was long ago drawn up under Soviet direction, and only awaits formal proclamation.

Court Refuses Suppression of Gaming Evidence

A motion to suppress evidence in two gambling cases on the ground it was obtained with illegal search warrents was overruled as "premature" yesterday by the Alexandria Corporation Court.

The cases involved Ralph Spotswood, 36, of 318 N. Henry st., and John C. Robert, 42, of 424 N. Royal st., both of Alexandria, who were convicted in Alexandria Police Court last July of operating lotteries. The police court judge held the evidence was admissible whether obtained legally or not. The convictions were appealed.

Corporation Court Judge William P. Woolls, who will hear the appeal, overruled the motion without hearing argument after City Attorney V. Floyd Williams contended the court couldn't rule on evidence until it had been heard. The case will probably be set for hearing at the beginning of the new court term next Monday.

British Chamber Asks Civil Service Cut

Cardiff, Wales, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The National Chamber of Trade today demanded further cuts in government expenses, particularly on civil servants "who are busy brewing tea from morning to night."

Hurricane Wanes After Causing Millions In Damage to Crops in Texas Coastal Area

Houston, Oct. 4 (AP).—A Gulf hurricane lost much of its punch today after swatting at this Texas metropolis, and dealing a heavy blow at coastal crops. Farm losses were in the millions.

The slap at this city of more than 500,000 was surprisingly light. Damage to a bumper rice, cotton and vegetable crop was the greatest toll.

The hurricane was dying out today about 80 miles north of Houston. The Weather Bureau said heavy rains and high winds will continue tonight.

The hurricane first struck at the rich industrial and agricultural coastal area between Matagorda and Freeport. Then, about 1:30 a. m., it hit Houston.

28,800 in Storm Shelters

Trees were bent level. Some taped-up glass store windows buckled. Sheets of rain made ponds of underpasses, and blocked some streets. About 5000 persons huddled in the city auditorium, where the blare of juke boxes failed to drown out the screeching of the storm.

The Red Cross said 28,800 persons found refuge in storm shelters at Houston, Galveston, Port Arthur, Bay City, Victoria and Port Lavaca. Many others blocked highways last night as they fled inland.

As it threshed inland, the hurricane whipped rice and cotton fields. In Jefferson County (Beaumont), where only 15 percent of an eight-million-dollar rice crop had been reaped, losses ranged from 20 to 70 percent.

A. H. Boyt, president of the American Rice Growers Association, said damage was "heavy."

Vegetable crops, as well as rice and cotton, were hard hit in Harris County (Houston). The total loss was set at about two million dollars, with rice worst damaged.

Heavy seas at Port Arkansas flooded streets, and ripped out 200 feet of South Piers. Another 200 feet of the pier was buckled. Freeport was cut off from communication, and plunged into darkness by a power failure.

Woman Electrocuted

The only known storm fatality was Mrs. Alpha Hebert, elderly Port Neches woman. She slipped in the mud today, seized an electric wire blown down by the storm, and was electrocuted.

Jimmie Simpson, 21, of Palacios, was missing after volunteering to swim to shore from a stalled cabin cruiser in Matagorda Bay. B. O. Speights, proprietor of the Dirty Shame Bar in Houston, cut his hand trying to board up a window.

More than 3000 telephones were knocked out of service in Houston and Harris County.

To Fete New Residents

New residents of the Locust Hill Estates in Bethesda, Md., will be entertained from 6 to 8 p. m. today by the Locust Hill Estates Citizen Association at 8585 Broadbrook dr. The association will hold its first business meeting at 8:15 p. m. October 11, at the home of its president, Dr. Karl Haber, 8950 Locust Hill rd.

It is not the atom bomb that will bring World War III. For now that Russia has the atom bomb, its use as a military weapon probably will be outlawed, just as poison gas was outlawed. No nation, great or small, dares to use gas or germ warfare for fear of reprisal. No power will initiate vast destruction by means of atomic weapons, knowing that another great power will retaliate with even more terrible destruction.

For this reason, a revitalized United Nations must forge a workable agreement between Russia, the United States and the other powers, on the international control of atomic weapons.

But outlawing this weapon is not enough. Gas warfare has been outlawed by agreement for years, yet World War II came just the same. There is no guarantee that if atomic warfare is outlawed we will not drift into World War III because of the much greater threat to peace, the Iron Curtain.

So long as the Iron Curtain divides Europe into the secret East and the open West, suspicion, fear, lack of mutual understanding, frustration and the building up of human hate, must inevitably lead to greater and greater military apprehension, preparedness for war . . . and finally explosion into war itself. Already we are in the midst of a colossal armaments race.

There is now practically no free movement of people or of ideas between Russia and her satellite countries on the one hand, and Western Europe and the rest of the Western Hemisphere on the other. Practically all cultural relations are at a standstill. All the suggestions offered by our State Department and various private organizations since the end of the war to exchange students, artists, scientists and literature have failed or remain unacknowledged.

Not only have these offers been turned down or disregarded but worse still the Iron Curtain has been made more rigid and impenetrable. It is, in fact, now illegal for a Russian citizen to indulge in conversation with foreigners!

This is the picture as some of us, in the countries not dominated by Russia, see it. The Russians may have their own version of recent international developments to justify their blind and completely isolationist policy. They point to what they consider hostile plans and pronouncements on the part of western countries and western spokesmen that seem to them to belie the genuine offers to establish friendly relations. There is no point now in analyzing Russian thinking . . . or in arguing where the responsibility lies for this dangerous state of affairs. The fact stares us in the face that the world is divided intellectually, economically and morally into two great camps, and that the Iron Curtain between these two camps must be removed before horrible and irrevocable damage is done on both sides.

The Russian people are now given a completely distorted view of our way of life, of our social, economic, political and religious aims and aspirations. We have no knowledge what the Russians are thinking and feeling except in the words and actions of their official spokesmen. On the basis of these words and actions we cannot but conclude that the Russian people are being taught consistently that we are out to destroy them and their system. Therefore we of the West must, under the circumstances, be prepared for the worst until the Iron Curtain is lifted.

The attitude of the two camps on atomic energy and weapons is now undergoing change in view of the fact that Russia, as well as the United States, today possesses atomic power. But even more urgently does the barrier of the Iron Curtain require removal. For if peace is our objective, any agreement to outlaw the military use of the atomic bomb or the agreement on the international control and inspection of atomic energy, must be accompanied by the raising of the Iron Curtain. Nothing less. And it is to this end that the statesmen of the whole world must fervently devote themselves, now.

For only in the absence of iron curtains, only with the establishment of a free interchange and movement between the East and the West of goods, people and cultures, such as must exist between friendly neighbors, is there hope for the peace worthy of the struggle.

Olds Disapproved In Spite of Truman

LELAND OLDS
Truman stands by him birthday of liberty. They will view it as the day set apart by the world's greatest exploiters to glorify their rise to power."

Another, in a Federated Press labor letter, November 11, 1925, said:

"Lenin knew what would take the place of political partyism when he made his bid for power in Russia with the slogan 'All Power to the Soviets' . . . That change is coming in America. Upon labor's advance preparation will depend its share in the new apportionment of authority."

Olds testified twice in his own defense.

Mr. Truman argued that nothing in the testimony raised any doubts in his mind about the integrity, loyalty or ability of his nominee.

"The issue before us is not whether we agree with everything Mr. Olds may have ever said, or even whether we agree with all of his actions as a member of the Federal Power Commission," the President argued.

Says He Proved His Fitness

"The issue is whether his whole record is such as to lead us to believe that he will serve the Nation well as a member of the Federal Power Commission."

Mr. Truman contended that Olds has proved his qualifications and has "earnestly sought to protect the public against the narrow interests of special groups."

He said Olds is supported by "millions of people," including representatives of labor, agriculture, municipal officials, State regulatory bodies, educators and experts in the utility field."

"However," he wrote, "Mr. Olds has also made enemies during his service on the Federal Power Commission. The powerful corporations subject to regulation by the commission have not been pleased with Mr. Olds. They now seek to prevent his confirmation for another term.

Johnson Calls Him Shocking

"It would be most unfortunate if they should succeed. We cannot allow great corporations to dominate the commissions which have been created to regulate them."

Johnson replied that the subcommittee was "shocked beyond description by the political and economic views expressed by Mr. Olds some years ago."

"We cannot believe that a person under our democratic capitalistic system holding such views is qualified to act in a quasijudicial capacity in the regulation of industry," he said.

Recognition Bid of Chinese Pigeonholed

By The Associated Press

A request by China's new Communist regime for United States diplomatic recognition was shoved yesterday into an official American pigeonhole.

The State Department said in announcing its receipt there are no present plans for either answering or acknowledging it. The request, submitted in a letter signed by Chou En-lai, Communist foreign minister, was in terse terms which a U. S. spokesman called "an implied insult."

Before a decision is reached whether to recognize the government just proclaimed by the Communists at Peiping, the State Department plans to consult with Britain and the other western powers and with Congress.

Diplomats forecast that action will not be speeded by the quick recognition proclaimed by Russia and the Soviet bloc nations.

The Communist request was handed on Saturday to O. Edmund Clubb, American consul general at Peiping, and forwarded to Washington over the weekend.

It appeared to be a form letter sent to all the foreign diplomatic missions. Included with it was a copy of the proclamation establishing the Communist government.

Lacking were the usual diplomatic expressions of good will and friendship.

Chinese Reds Threaten 2 Key Cities Near Canton

Canton, Oct. 4 (AP).—The long-smoldering front north of Canton burst into flame today. Attacking Reds menaced two key cities.

Official and private reports hinted the fateful battle for south China may be at hand.

Threatened by the Reds were Hengyang, Nationalist base 265 miles north of Canton, and the key rail city of Kukong only 125 miles north.

Civilians in large numbers began fleeing Kukong. The Reds were reported 10 miles away on the northeast and 15 miles on the southeast.

The fall of Kukong would cut the railway over which Hengyang gets supplies from Canton.

Hengyang also was faced with the threat of being cut off by a new drive to the west. Two Communist armies, possible 50,000 men, were driving south after bypassing Sinhwa, 95 miles northwest of Hengyang, the official Central News Agency said.

CAA Asks Public to Report All Cases of Reckless Flying

The public was called upon yesterday by the armed forces and the Civil Aeronautics Administration to report cases of "buzzing" or other reckless flying by pilots.

All CAA officers have been made reporting points for such incidents involving either civil or military aircraft, the CAA announcement said.

"Anyone who observes an airplane 'buzzing' houses, people, or other aircraft," said D. W. Rentzel, administrator of civil aeronautics, "should telephone the nearest CAA office, giving all details which will help identify the plane. Usually the telephone will be listed under 'United States Government.' The report should be confirmed by a letter to the same office, so there will be a legal basis for any action taken.

"It is very important to try to get the registration number of offending civil aircraft, which is displayed on the left half of the lower surface of the wing, and on the vertical tail surface. Without this number, it is quite difficult to identify the violator.

"Military aircraft always have numbers on the tail. In addition, most Air Force planes have base numbers on the side of the fuselage, and Navy planes have a series of three numbers on the side of the fuselage, lower left wing, and top of right wing."

Dalai Lama Permits Plane to Go to Thomas

By the United Press

The State Department announced yesterday that American officials have been granted "rare" permission to land a plane in Tibet to rescue Lowell Thomas, injured American news commentator.

Department spokesmen said the Dalai Lama, ruler of the remote nation in the towering Himalayas, had agreed to allow the aircraft to pick up Thomas. The commentator was hurt when thrown by a horse after a visit to the "forbidden city" of Lhasa.

77 Die as Argentine Minesweeper Sinks

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Seventy-seven Argentine navy officers and men aboard the minesweeper Fournier died September 22 when the ship was torn asunder by a submerged rock in Magellan Straits, and sank in a few minutes, the navy minister announced today.

Many sleeping crewmen were trapped in their quarters. Those who had a chance to jump overboard were frozen to death in a few minutes.

U. S. Speeded Red Bomb, Stassen Says

New York, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Harold E. Stassen charged today that American shipments of atomic research equipment to Russia two years ago helped the Soviet Union produce an atom bomb "ahead of schedule."

Stassen charged also that Russian espionage in this country, aided by the "loose administration of the Truman Administration since the war" had hastened Russian atomic development.

Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania, made these charges aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth as he returned from a 2½ week trip to Britain.

The former candidate for the Republican presidential nomination said he thought a "thorough investigation of those shipments should be made and full responsibility should be fixed."

CBS Asks Permit For Color Television

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Declaring that the public wants color television now and that CBS is "ready today," Columbia Broadcasting System yesterday asked the Federal Communications Commission to authorize a system quickly.

Stanton

Frank Stanton, CBS president, testifying at the FCC hearings on new video channels and possible color operations, asked the commission to approve the color system which best satisfies the test of "performance, cost, time and compatibility."

Because of technical engineering problems and costs to the consumer, only one color system will be approved by the FCC.

Demonstrations Begin Thursday

CBS insisted its system met all the tests, but maintained that its interest in color television was so great that it urged its adoption "by any system which best suits the problem, no matter by whom invented, no matter by whom suggested."

A series of official color demonstrations starts here Thursday. The commission will move to the Carlton Hotel ballroom, along with its large technical staff, to view a day-long demonstration of the CBS system.

The program, to be broadcast from across the city, will include live talent dancing, singing and juggling acts, and a fashion showing, all broadcast from varying distances.

On Friday the same equipment will pick up a high school football scrimmage from a field in northwest Washington.

RCA to Follow

RCA's color demonstration will follow next week.

If the commission should decide by next January 1 to permit color television, Stanton said, it would be fair to assume that all new sets offered for sale would have adaption to color receiving embodied in them.

He figured that by the end of the year three million black and white sets will have been sold; by 1950, six million and by 1952 14 million.

Therefore, he estimated, the maximum number of sets incapable of producing black and white pictures from color signals by January 1, 1950, would be three million.

By the end of 1952, Stanton estimated, less than 10 percent of television set owners would have any problem of receiving black and white pictures at least from color signals.

"Color television is inevitable," the CBS President said, "and therefore the sooner the transition to it can be made the better for all concerned."

Stanton directly criticized the competing color system offered by Radio Corp. of America. He warned that under RCA process there would be two types of color reception—one in full color, and the other in a less expensive model in two colors only.

"It would be completely inconsistent with the public interest," Stanton declared, "to adopt a double standard—one for the rich and one for everybody else."

Tests in Question

The hearing room rippled with laughter when Commissioner Edward M. Webster started inquiring about the coming color television tests. He wanted to know who was competent to decide between or among different systems.

"Are you going to say," demanded Webster, "that the seven of us with just our seven eyes can determine what's a good color picture?"

Tom Healy of Tele-Communications Reports quipped "It's the Cyclops Commission now"

RCA earlier testified that the cost of color sets under its system would range initially from $400 to $1000.

Manufacturers to Testify

Stanton gave no immediate figures on the cost of receivers for CBS color, but said a group of manufacturers would be placed on the stand to testify on this factor.

Stanton said that "no other single organization has devoted the time, human resources or money to the development of color" that Columbia has. He said that behind the CBS color system are more than 10,000 hours of color camera operation and more than $3,500,000 expended.

He disclosed that in recent months CBS has been exploring the possibility of expanding its color television interests, joining with electronic manufacturing and industrial organization "to pursue the development of color television on a broader front than Columbia feels it is equipped to do alone."

U. S. to Issue New Edition of Lives Of Congressmen

Collected biographies of everyone who has served in Congress will be published next fall.

It will be the new edition of "The Biographical Directory of the American Congress."

James L. Harrison, compiler of the directory and staff director of the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing, said yesterday the first part of manuscript has been sent to the Government Printing Office.

It will contain about 9000 individual biographies, 1300 more than the last edition published in 1927.

Bevan Admits 'Bladder of Lies' Phrase Is His Own

London, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Health Minister Aneurin Bevan admitted today that a reference to Winston Churchill as a "bloated bladder of lies" was his own idea rather than a classic quotation.

Churchill protested when Bevan shouted "I welcome the opportunity for pricking this bloated bladder of lies with the poinard of truth" during an attack on the conservative leader in the House of Commons last Thursday.

The speaker ruled, however, that the remark could remain in the record because it was a quotation rather than a personal attack. However, a close search of Shakespeare, the Bible and standard reference works uncovered no trace of the phrase.

Asked today where the quotation originated, Bevan laughed: "I blame nobody for it but myself."

the only thing to do: "I'm fighting with my back to the wall."

Child Welfare Division personnel, who had been ordered by Judge Goldsborough to care for Jonathon pending court decision of his case, were momentarily baffled by the advent of the two other Little children.

For a time, all three children sat in a reception room on the fifth floor of the dingy Child Welfare Division headquarters while welfare workers set wheels in motion for their care.

"Mother Is Right"

Christine calmly watched over young Gregory and Jonathon. A student in 9-B at Langley Junior High School, she told welfare workers her mother had told her to stay, and she was staying. She reiterated her mother's position. She told this reporter, "Of course, my mother is right."

Earlier, Mrs. Little proudly stated of her daughter: "She doesn't drink or smoke, and she's never had a date." Christine later added that she had gone to school proms and barn dances but "I haven't had time for special dates."

Within an hour, child welfare workers had come to take Jonathon. Placement for him in a foster home had already been arranged. He is to be given boarding care there.

By the day's end, when neither of the Littles had returned for the other two children, Mrs. Robin R. Miller, superintendent, said the children were ordered transferred to the Industrial Home Annex for temporary care. This arrangement will give the division time for further talks with the parents, time to determine a future plan.

One Child Born Dead

Mrs. Little, who was almost hysterical when she talked with this reporter, said that she had wanted to adopt a child because the first child she and Mr. Little had, in 1944, was born dead. "Childbirth is very difficult for me," she said.

She said that Mrs. Miller waived her rights to Jonathon in a notarized statement signed on September 30, 1946, shortly after his birth. Mrs. Little said that last month, when another child, her 18-month-old son, Benjamin, was fatally burned in a fire at their home at 1317 10th st. nw., she had been very upset.

"And it was right after that," she said, "That she (Mrs. Miller) started trying to get Jonathon away from me."

Mrs. Little's lawyer, Jefferson Busby, sr., said he had the adoption waiver in his possession.

Mrs. Little also is central figure in a case now before the United States Supreme Court on whether a Health Department inspector who has no warrant may inspect private premises if the owner objects. The case has been appealed from the lower courts, where Mrs. Little was sustained in refusing admission to the inspector.

The inspector testified "that there was an accumulation of loose and uncovered garbage and trash in the halls of said premises and that certain of the persons residing therein had failed to avail themselves of the toilet facilities."

Yesterday Mrs. Little said: "They say I live in slums. Well, I'm proud to have a daughter like I've got if that is what living in slums does to you."

Busby said yesterday that he had no idea why Judge Goldsborough had changed his mind about permitting Mrs. Little to keep young Jonathon while the custody case is being decided. Judge Goldsborough has refused to divulge the information which made him change his mind, stating it might hamper his investigation of the case.

'Been Through a Lot'

Busby said he had not been consulted by Mrs. Little before she left her children with the Welfare Department. "The poor woman has been through a lot," he said.

Meanwhile, the custody case which started the whole furore is still undecided. Judge Goldsborough now is considering a habeas corpus petition filed by Mrs. Miller, who lives at 6123 Parkwood rd., Landover, Md., for the recovery of her child.

An investigation of the case is now under way by the court. The case has been continued until October 24.

Mrs. Miller contends she never meant to give the child to the Littles for adoption. But Attorney Busby has produced a notarized statement signed by Mrs. Miller stating that Jonathon was to be "delivered personally" to the Littles for adoption "absolutely and without any reservation or purpose to repossess the child."

Son-in-Law's Slaying Held Justified by Jury

A coroner's jury, returning a verdict of justifiable homicide, yesterday cleared Thomas A. Lewis, 49, of 5118 Lee st. ne., of blame in connection with the death of Lewis' son-in-law, Eugene Ellison, 24, of the Lee st. address.

Ellison died early Sunday in Gallinger Hospital after being shot six times with a .38-calibre pistol during a family argument. Lewis said the brawl started when Ellison assaulted Lewis' wife.

U. S. Halts Mail To Canadian Mine Pushers

The Postoffice Department reported yesterday it has halted mail deliveries to 14 Toronto, Canada, men and 12 Toronto firm names under which they were offering mine stock in this country.

Orders issued by Postmaster General Donaldson set out that they were "using the United States mails in the conduct and promotion of unlawful enterprises" under "false, assumed and fictitious (business organization) names."

The Donaldson orders, dated August 15 and July 25, said literature sent out under the specified firm names had "solicited remittances for the purchase of shares of stock in divers gold, uranium, lead, zinc and other mine promotional ventures."

A report by Department Trial Examiner James C. Haynes, jr., which formed the basis of the orders, said the advertising literature "invariably holds out the possibility of substantial and almost certain profits."

The trial examiner's report, adopted by the Postmaster General, said all those named had ignored warnings by the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission that it is a violation of United States law to use the mails for offerings of unregistered securities by unregistered broker-dealers.

The examiner declared the offerings also violate the "so-called blue sky laws" of States, many of which had tried to "prohibit offers of the stocks in question."

Company names in which stock shares allegedly were solicited were set out as:

The Markwood Mining Corp., Ltd., Camrose Gold and Metals Ltd., Dalo Oil Co., Ltd., Palermo Gold Mines, Ltd., Karraka Gold Mines, Ltd., Minoil Exploration, Ltd., Meg Petroleum Drillers, Ltd., and Concord Mines Ltd.

Also, Keymor Gold Mines, Ltd., Camsell River Silver Mines, Ltd., Central Sudbury Lead-Zinic Mines, Ltd., Saratoga Exploration Co., Ltd., Amshaw Porcupine Mines, Ltd., Halden Red Lake Mines, Ltd., Gordons Mining Corp., Ltd., Pacemaker Petroleums Ltd., Quesabe Mines, Ltd., Canadian Royalties, Ltd., and Consolidated Astoria Mines Ltd.

Cripps Warns Of Inflation

figure, Cripps said that in terms of the old $4.03 pound the reserves at the end of the third quarter, September 30, were only 351 million pounds ($1,414,530,000) compared with 406 million ($1,636,180,000) at the end of June and 465 million ($1,873,950,000) at the end of March.

Drain Slowed in Summer

During the summer, he said, Britain's dollar reserve drain was slowed. By reducing dollar exports the deficit or dollar gap during July, August and September—before deducting American an. Canadian aid—was 133 million pounds ($535,990,000). This, compared with a second-quarter deficit of 157 million pounds ($632,710,000), is considered a dangerous high.

In terms of pounds, Britain's reserves increased by 44 percent with devaluation, because dollars and gold now buy that many more pounds.

"These figures are perhaps not s. bad as some people may have feared," Cripps said, referring to predictions that reserves had now dropped to nearly 300 million pounds ($1,200,900,000), but they are quite bad enough."

Attlee Visits U. S. Air Force Bomber Group

Marham Air Base, England, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee visited the Forty-third Bombardment Group of the United States Air Force's Third Division today, and said he was "much impressed" with British and American cooperation.

Attlee was welcomed to the base by Maj. Gen. Leon W. Johnson, commander of the Third Air Division, who conducted him around the rows of B-29's, Superforts and B-50's.

Earlier, Attlee visited the Royal Air Force jet fighter base at Horsham St. Faith, where he talked with two American Air Force officers stationed there.

Senate Recommits Anderson Farm Bill

spoke testily to Lucas on several occasions. Lucas, visibly irritated, snapped back, once accusing Barkley of "telling me what to do all evening."

Others Get Taste of It

"I have not done any such thing," Barkley responded. Several other Senators also got a taste of the usually affable Barkley's sternness. Once, while Anderson was arguing a point with several Senators at one time, Barkley snapped:

"Is the Senator yielding to everybody?"

The revolt against the Anderson plan, which had been approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee, was led by two members of that group: Republican Senator Milton R. Young (N., Dak.) and Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.). Their opponents were similarly bi-partisan, the leaders being Democrats Anderson (N. Mex.) and Lucas (Ill.) and Republicans George D. Aiken (Vt.) and Edward J. Thye (Minn.).

The Young-Russell amendment was voted on twice. The first time it lost by 38 to 37, and the proponents confidently pushed the bill on towards final vote.

Moves for Reconsideration

Shortly afterward Senator Garrett L. Withers (D., Ky.), who had voted to defeat the amendment, moved for reconsideration. This was followed by a move to table the Withers motion. The latter motion resulted in a tie vote, 37 to 37, which Barkley settled by voting against tabling. The vote to reconsider carried in a similar manner at once.

After the vote, Aiken declared that the amendment would require that an additional five billion dollars be given the Commodity Credit Corporation to meet the added cost.

Anderson agreed with Aiken, and added that the additional cost of the bill would be two billion dollars a year—"maybe more."

Anderson estimated that the change would cost the Government an additional 600 million dollars for corn annually; 250 million for wheat and 50 million for cotton. He declined to estimate the additional cost for supporting peanuts, tobacco and rice—all basic commodities covered by the amendment.

Would Hike Food Bill

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) inquired of the farm bloc speakers how the amendment would affect consumers. He was assured the additional cost to the Nation's food bill would run into the billions.

Thye, after a violent denunciation of the Senate's sudden switch presented a new amendment, adding pork, chickens, eggs and turkeys to the list of commodities to be granted mandatory price supports.

Thye stirred up a sectional argument, when he declared pork, chickens, etc., were more entitled to mandatory price supports than some Southern crops, such as rice and peanuts. Neither of these, he said, are on the list of the top 17 farm products—although turkeys, eggs, chickens and pork are, he said.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) also asked that tree nuts and fruits be added to the list of those granted mandatory support, while Senator Spessard Holland (D., Fla.) asked equal treatment for vegetable growers and citrus fruit orchardists.

The sudden reversal in the voting brought up assurances from several Senators that last night's action would clear the way for consideration of the Brannan Plan. That is a program submitted by the Secretary of Agriculture designed to let food prices go down and pay the difference to farmers in the form of subsidies.

Both Senate and House leaders had rejected the Brannan plan earlier this session on the grounds that it would cost too much and bring too much regimentation for the Nation's agriculture.

The new amendment, however, will "cost more than the Brannan plan," Aiken declared, while Anderson asserted that the restrictions necessary for the 90 percent of parity would be more strict than called for by the Brannan proposal.

Navy to Probe Leak; Critics Win Hearing

an endorsement," Denfeld declared, does not "mean approval."

Apparently, he was trying to divorce himself from some of the sharper criticism of the Pentagon high command contained in the Bogan letter. For, both Radford and Denfeld could have completely disassociated themselves from the latter's opinions by simply writing "forwarded" in their covering letters or specifically stating they disagreed with what he said.

Instead, both agreed that naval morale had been greatly weakened by events since unification. Radford said that Bogan's views were shared by a majority of the officers of the Pacific Fleet, and Denfeld "concurred" in this.

The latter also declared many naval men feel that any weakening of naval power is a blow to national security. He quoted a 1945 statement by Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King in support of this view.

Leak "Distressed" Denfeld

Denfeld declared he was "distressed" that a confidential letter from an admiral to the Secretary of the Navy should have been made public.

"Regardless of the nature of the communication or the motives of the personnel involved," he added, "one of the Navy's cardinal regulations has been broken, which necessarily must be made the subject of an official investigation, with appropriated action in view."

Navy men took Denfeld's reference to the "nature of the communication" as a tacit acknowledgment that the confidential document actually did not contain any military secrets.

However, a court of inquiry followed by a court-martial almost certainly is in store for those concerned with slipping the document to reporters Monday, if they are identified.

Arends Discloses Hearing Plan

Representative Leslie C. Arends (R., Ill.) disclosed the decision of House Armed Services Committee leaders to investigate. He said they agreed to call Denfeld, Radford and Bogan to testify first, with others probably heard later. Members said they wanted a full investigation, with no censoring of witnesses by Defense chiefs.

President Truman gave a brief comment on the row yesterday. While inspecting the Army base at Fort Bragg, N. C., he told officers:

"I hope that when the Navy and Air Force get their troubles settled, the Army as usual will go along."

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson told reporters he had no present intention of intervening into the Navy's probe. He indicated that he would leave that to Secretary Matthews.

Later, Johnson told members of the Senate Appropriations Committee that he is confident that an amicable settlement of the Navy-Air Force differences can be reached. Senators declared that he told them at a closed session that he rejected Navy claims that emphasis on the Air Force was undermining sea power.

Superiority of Big Three

America's naval strength added to that of Britain and France provides overwhelming superiority over any possible enemy, and therefore there is no cause for the naval officers' complaints, said Johnson, the Senators declared.

Interviewed aboard his flagship, the aircraft carrier Valley Force, in San Diego Bay, Vice Admiral Bogan yesterday said he welcomed an opportunity to testify in elaboration of his charges.

"I'm happy my letter was released to the public," said Bogan, according to the United Press. "But I am sorry it was released by the method with which it was. Having been disclosed that way, it savors of fear."

300,000 Moslems Led To Mecca by Ibn Saud

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 4 (AP).—Saudi Arabia's King Ibn Saud led 300,000 Moslems on the traditional annual pilgrimage to Mecca yesterday, the Arab News Agency reported.

Of the pilgrims, 100,000 had come from abroad, some from China and Indonesia.

Reports of Need Denied By Lady Mountbatten

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Lady Iris Mountbatten, a cousin of King George VI, deplored London reports today that she was penniless and living on the charity of American friends.

The trouble is English financial regulations and devaluation, said the blond, 29-year-old beauty, well known in New York cafe society.

"My family is well off and so am I," Lady Mountbatten said. "It's just difficult in these trying times to get money out of the country.

"I get a little more than 1000 pounds sterling a year on which to live. This was not much before the pound was devalued. It is less now. But I have neither borrowed nor grumbled."

Tara Singh, Sikh Chief, Released From Prison

New Delhi, India, Oct. 4 (U.P.)—Sikh Leader Tara Singh, former president of the Akali Dal organization of extremists, has been released from prison, it was announced today in Lucknow.

Tara Singh opposed the Indian National Congress and the congress governments in the central provinces. Last spring he agitated for a separate Sikh province in East Punjab.

Vote Machines Ordered by Prince Georges

Use of voting machines in the 1950 election in Prince Georges County virtually was assured yesterday when the county commissioners voted to lease 125 machines.

The commissioners voted to pay $150 a year for each machine, the payments to be applied to complete purchase of the machines in 10 years.

Bids have been offered by two companies, the Automatic Voting Machine Corp. of Jamestown, N. Y., and the Shout Voting Machine Co. of Philadelphia. The commissioners voted to accept the bid on the Automatic machines, which are similar to those in use in Montgomery, Howard and Anne Arundel counties and Baltimore City.

The commissioners also authorized the board of election supervisors to hold two special registration days, November 1 and 8, to register as many of the expected 10,000 new voters as possible.

Reasons for Increase

Phenomenal growth of the county, coupled with the repeal of the declaration of intention act, which required new residents to declare their intention to become citizens at least a year before elections, are credited with the increase in voters. The present registration is approximately 45,000.

The election supervisors, Alexander Buscher, chairman; Samuel A. Wyvill and John Underwood, recommended purchase of the Automatic machines, but several commissioners favored the Shout machine.

Later, after representatives of the two voting machine companies had left, the commissioners retired into executive session with the election supervisors. After the session they announced they had decided to accept the Automatic machine lease plan.

New Precincts Evaded

Election board members said that $10,000 a year will be saved after the machines are paid for and that failure to provide machines for next year would cause the creation of 10 new voting precincts, which will not be needed with machines.

The board also directed County Treasurer James B. Bland to collect on a half-yearly basis the taxes of Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and Metropolitan area, but not State taxes. Bland had asked instructions in view of the fact that Montgomery County does not collect these special taxes on half-yearly bills.

Nurse Dies As Bed Burns In Rockville

A 34-year-old Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium nurse suffocated early yesterday when smoke and flame filled her bedroom in Rockville and forced seven other residents of the building to the street.

The nurse, Miss Alta Matheney, lived on the first-floor of a two-story frame dwelling owned by S. P. Hersperger at 212 Reading ave.

Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, listed her death as accidental due to suffocation.

Firemen believed the fire started from a cigarette igniting bed clothes. It was confined largely to Miss Matheney's bedroom. Damage was estimated at $2500.

Miss Matheney, employed at Chestnut Lodge Sanitarium in Rockville for about five years, had lived at the Reading ave. address for about five months.

Hersperger, owner of the house, said he was awakened about 1 a. m. by a scream coming from Miss Matheney's apartment. He rushed to it, he said, kicked in the door but was forced back by flames.

After rousing his wife and daughter, he called the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department. Firemen found Miss Matheney's body on the kitchen floor.

Other occupants routed by the blaze were Lieut. G. W. Linthicum, chief of the Montgomery County Detective Bureau, and his wife, who descended from the upper floor by a back stair, Mr. and Mrs. Earl P. Turner, who climbed from a first-floor window.

Salaries Increased In 8 County Jobs

The Man Who—

—follows the horses

Salary increases for eight top secretarial jobs in Montgomery County, effective last Saturday, were announced yesterday, the result of a comprehensive survey of the county's 400 civil service jobs.

The studies are being made by Ben H. Hall, personnel assistant to County Manager Irving G. McNayr, to bring salaries in line with those for similar work in the District and Federal Government and to eliminate unnecessary positions.

Salary increases, effective last Saturday, were given the following:

Mrs. Alice Snow, administrative assistant in the Silver Spring County Building, from $2772 to $2860; Mrs. Eloise Graham, who holds the same post in Bethesda, from $2900 to $3003; Mrs. Mildred Weaver, buyer in the purchasing bureau, from $2904 to $3080.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Benson, secretary to the county council, and Miss Gladys Oden, secretary to the county manager, $2904 to $3003; Mrs. Alice B. Huntington, secretary to the county attorney, $2640 to $2860, and Mrs. Grace Dayhoff, secretary to the finance director, and Miss Betty G. Viers, secretary to the assessments supervisor, $2772 to $2860.

The increases raised the classifications of the eight employes, Hall said, to a point where they may receive a top salary of from $300 to $400 more than in their former levels.

Hall said he would undertake a survey of positions in the Health and Finance Departments later this week.

Announcement also was made yesterday of the appointment of three new Montgomery County public health nurses. They are Miss Marion Weber, Cumberland, who will receive $3080 annually; Mrs. Katherine M. Kelley, Kensington, $2640, and Mrs. Virginia C. Maxwell, of Rockville, $3080.

Two nurses with temporary status were given a temporary appointment. They are Mrs. Lily J. Borregard of Chevy Chase and Mrs. Apolonia Marie Samples of Rockville. Each will receive $2640.

Miss Nina Kinsella Named Warden of U. S. Reformatory

Appointment of Miss Nina Kinsella of Washington, as warden of the Federal Reformatory for women at Alberson, W. Va., was announced yesterday by Attorney McGrath.

Miss Kinsella succeeds Miss Helen Hironimus, who retired August 31. The appointment is effective immediately.

Miss Kinsella has served since 1930 as executive assistant to the director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons. A native of Salem, Mass., she worked with the Massachusetts Department of Corrections before coming here.

Miss Hironimus had been with the reformatory since its opening about 30 years ago.

$55.9 Million for New Schools Approved by Maryland Board

Record School Budget Requested in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—The State Board of Education today asked the Governor's Budget Advisory Board for a general fund appropriation of $74,842,737 for the 1950-52 biennium.

This request topped the present record general fund appropriation for public schools of $59,061,521 by $15,781,216.

The total of all funds asked by the board for the next biennium was $81,841,804, compared with $65,109,451 during 1948-50.

For maintenance of public free schools, the board's budget called for $5,426,000 in 1950-51 and $6,190,000 in 1951-52 from the State's general fund.

This money would be supplemented by special funds of $120,000 for the two years.

The board also said it was convinced that as soon as practicable approximately $11,500,000 of additional money per year should be provided for increasing teachers' salaries.

It was the board's judgment that it is a sound policy to request approximately one half of this amount for each year of the coming biennium—$5,500,000 the first year and $6,500,000 for the second year.

The increase requested for the second year over the first was said to be necessary to provide for an estimated increase in average daily attendance of pupils.

The budget was presented to the board by former Senator W. N. Neff of Abingdon in the absence of President Blake T. Newton who is out of the State.

Neff expressed hope the board would be pleased with the requests which he described as "conservative." He noted that there were increases involved but he said there also have been increasing needs in the educational field.

Program Will Add 1395 Classrooms

Baltimore, Oct. 4 (AP).—A $55,969,971.95 program for school construction in Maryland was approved today by the board of public works.

The board approved grants and loans to political subdivisions totaling $30,644,904.45. To that amount will be added $25,325,167.50 raised by the local units.

The construction program calls for erection of 42 new elementary schools, 19 high schools and three combination elementary and high schools throughout the State. Additions to 49 existing buildings also are planned.

The total program will provide 1395 extra classrooms.

The loans and grants will go to 17 counties and Baltimore City. Six counties—Caroline, Dorchester, Howard, St. Mary's, Somerset and Wicomico have not applied either for loans or grants to date.

The board approved outright grants of $12,855,435.50 from the 20-million-dollar bond issue authorized by the last session of the Legislature. Loans approved totaled $17,789,368.95 from the 50-million-dollar State credit pool.

Decision Reserved On Congressman's Right to Try Case

Philadelphia, Oct. 4 (AP).—A special five-judge United States Circuit Court of Appeals was asked today to rule whether Congressmen can appear in Federal courts for defendants accused of violating United States laws.

At the end of a two-hour hearing, the judges reserved decision.

The issue was brought before the court by Representative Earl Chudoff, Democrat, from the fourth Philadelphia district.

The case arose out of a warning from United States District Judge James P. McGranery that he proposed to cite Chudoff "for violation of the United States Criminal Code" if the Congressman appeared as counsel for Edward F. Turner, accused of misuse of the mails.

Chudoff is asking the special Court of Appeals to restrain McGranery from instituting prosecution or from preventing him from entering pleas on behalf of several defendants he represents.

The final outcome of the case will affect three-fifths of the members of Congress who are lawyers.

D. C. May Lift Its Virginia Doctor Curb

The recently imposed ban on free practice of Virginia doctors within the District may soon be lifted, its purpose accomplished, it was learned last night.

Such action is expected, perhaps today, by members of the District Commission on Licensure, in response to a request by the District Medical Society.

Last week, largely on the urging of the society, the commission announced its new regulations for control of practice here of Virginia physicians. The order canceled the $1 "border-line certificates" which authorized virtually unlimited practice and instituted a time-consuming procedure of separate certifications for each patient to be treated here.

Meant Virtual Ban

The order, if enforced, would have virtually banned the practice here of Virginia physicians, even for their own patients whom they have been treating in District hospitals. It was admittedly imposed to nettle Virginia doctors into taking steps to establish reciprocity. At present, Virginia laws require that Washington physicians pay a $50 license fee to treat patients in that State.

Paul Foley, working secretary of the licensure commission, said last night that though he couldn't speak officially for the commission he believes the ban will be lifted. If this can be done officially without the calling of a special commission meeting, he said, such action may be taken today.

Promised Assembly Action

The District Medical Society request to rescind the order, Foley said, pointed out that Virginia legislators have assured District medical authorities they will introduce legislation at the Virginia General Assembly, in January, to amend the $50 fee.

State Senator Charles R. Fenwick, of Arlington, Va., has announced his intention to introduce such legislation, and Virginia delegates to the General Assembly, George Damm and J. Maynard Magruder, have said they will vigorously support the proposed measure.

Czech Cabinet Post On Church Planned

Prague, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Czechoslovakia's Communist government decided today to establish a cabinet post to handle its most pressing internal problem—the Roman Catholic Church.

The official news agency reported that the cabinet had decided to set up a state board for all church affairs under a minister of cabinet rank. The decision must be approved by Parliament when it meets, but approval is expected to be almost automatic.

The new board will coordinate government forces for control of the church. In particular, it is expected to deal with church resistance to the government's proposed church control bill.

The decision to form the new board was announced after a series of new arrests which reportedly increased the number of priests in Czechoslovak jails to 250. The latest arrests reported were those of 26 parish priests in eastern Bohemia.

Meanwhile, it was reported that the government had decided to postpone the opening of Parliament until late October or early November.

Parliament originally was scheduled to meet September 15, to pass the church-control bill which has stirred up a storm of protest in church circles.

Informed sources said the delay in convening Parliament was due to a disagreement in government circles as to how fast the government should proceed against the church.

The bill would give the government complete control over clerical activities. Priests would be reduced to the status of government workers.

2d Secret Trial

Bulgars Jail Protestants, U. S. Charges

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The United States said today it had information of a second and secret trial of Protestant church leaders in Bulgaria.

The American statement was made by Benjamin V. Cohen in the special political committee of the United Nations General Assembly. He said information indicated the trial was held last July.

A delegation spokesman said later that, according to information received by Washington, a total of 10 Methodists, Adventists and Baptist pastors had been sentenced to 1 to 10 years, and that some appeared in court bearing signs of "ill treatment."

Cohen said the second trial was held behind closed doors "perhaps from fear of a world-wide reaction" such as followed the first trial of 15 Protestant pastors last March.

He added that "the usual paraphernalia, including 'confessions' recited by the defendants, were again present."

The American delegate charged that flouting by the Soviet bloc of treaty provisions in the East-West dispute over recent Balkan trials is "a matter of grave consequence" and demanded that the General Assembly send the case to the International Court.

The issue arose from prosecution of Hungary's Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty and other Roman Catholic and Protestant church leaders in Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania.

Although Cohen did not do so in his speech, an American delegation spokesman linked the church trials problem with this country's attitude toward Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky's proposal for a Big Five "peace pact."

The American delegation was said to feel there was no point in considering any new treaties if the West was rebuffed in attempts to gain compliance with old pacts.

Man, 62, Is Indicted In 33-Year-Old Slaying

Beckley, W. Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—Thirty-three years ago, Fletcher Fox was shot and killed during an argument in Terry, W. Va.

Yesterday, Doan Young, 62, was indicted by the Raleigh County grand jury on a murder charge growing out of the old shooting. Young was arrested in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., last summer on an assault charge. Police said an investigation showed he had been sought for more than three decades for the Fox killing.

11 Reds Lose Fight to Bring End to Trial at New York

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Top Communist leaders today lost their fight to have their conspiracy trial thrown out of Federal court.

Judge Harold R. Medina denied defense motions for a directed verdict of acquittal, dismissal of the indictment and for a mistrial.

The court then adjourned the trial until Thursday morning when the defense will begin summations to continue four days.

Another defense motion to strike out certain portions of prosecution testimony and exhibits still is under consideration, the court said.

Medina granted a motion to permit the defense to make corrections in a long list of requests for inclusion in the court's charge to the jury, but denied permission to submit additional requests for the charge.

Medina announced that the court will be in session for a full day Friday. This marked a departure from the usual weekend recess shortly after noon on Friday during the more than eight months of the trial. He also said he expected to continue court sessions through Columbus Day, Wednesday, October 12, which he pointed out is not a legal holiday under Federal law.

Elizabeth to Join Duke at Malta Before Christmas

London, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth, leaving baby Prince Charles at home, will fly to Malta shortly before Christmas to join her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, at that British naval base, informed sources said today.

It is not known how long the princess will remain on Malta, where she will be the guest of Earl and Countess Mountbatten, but she will probably make frequent trips home to see her baby and her family.

The duke will join the British Mediterranean Fleet, based at Malta, as first lieutenant of the destroyer Chequers October 17. His appointment is expected to last two years.

Persian Student Files Appeal in Traffic Conviction

A Persian student, who failed in an attempt to obtain a jury trial on a traffic charge in Bethesda Police Court September 26, will get an opportunity to present his defense before a panel after all.

Cyrus H. Khibiri, 27-year-old University of Southern California international relations student, yesterday filed notice of an appeal of his conviction for passing a red light with the Bethesda trial magistrate's office.

Khibiri, who said he is the son of a former Persian government official and diplomat, was fined $10 and costs by Judge James R. Miller despite his strong contention that the United States Constitution guarantees him a jury trial. The jurist explained that he could only obtain this on a traffic charge by appealing a lower court conviction.

Judge Miller at that time offered to personally write the appeal.

Inventor Settles Seduction Suit Out of Court

A $355,000 seduction suit filed here against Ralph L. Holcombe, 38, an aviation inventor, has been settled out of court, it was learned yesterday.

The suit had been filed for Miss Barbara D. Runnion, 20, through her mother, Mrs. Helen M. Carey, of Greenbelt, Md.

In announcing the settlement, attorneys for the parties said, "The terms of the settlement include the assigning of certain royalty rights to the plaintiffs. By agreement of the parties and counsel, no further information regarding the terms of settlement will be released."

In her suit, Miss Runnion said she was given liquor to relax her for aviation training before she was seduced.

The Strenuous Life

To be thrown from a horse and rolled upon in a remote mountain section is not considered one of the hazards confronting members of the Supreme Court. Yet it was always one of the hazards of Justice Douglas' life. He is an especially vigorous and active man who supplements his strenuous winters of opinion writing with strenuous summers of mountain climbing. His exceptional energy and zest are quite in keeping with the present temperament of the court and ought not to be discouraged. One may be sure, moreover, that if any man of 50 can survive the ordeal of 13 broken ribs, a punctured lung, and probably other injuries, without lasting impairment, it will be the wiry and tenacious jurist from the Far West. Certainly there will be no dissent from the hope that his recovery will be speedy and complete. Meanwhile the depleted Supreme Court began its fall term Monday, and we hope it will be careful till the jinx that seems to have settled upon it passes to some less important agency.

Prolegomenon

Well, there is one thing you can say about homo fanaticus: he can certainly take plenty of plain and assorted punishment. According to current reports, not a single hotel room is now available in Greater New York; and as for tickets to any of the first four games of the 1949 World Series, they are not to be obtained for love, which is perhaps understandable enough in the circumstances, nor for money, which is somewhat more surprising. The estimates of minimum attendance at the opening game, which, God, weather and the exigencies of international politics permitting, will be played today at the Yankee Stadium, are in the neighborhood of 70,000 persons. And if the stadium were twice as vast as it is, the estimates would be precisely twice as high.

After the super-tensile finishes in both leagues this season, you might have thought that the customers would have had enough in the way of heartstrain, headache and expense for one year, but it is not so. This appears to support the theory of the late Prof. Morris Cohen, himself a devotee, that baseball is not so much a sport as a religion—and perhaps the real religion of the American people. Certainly, it is liturgical in the sense of being the public expression of a widespread psychological attitude. And it seems to fit more precisely than any other religion the Marxist definition of an "opium of the people," inasmuch as it removes temporarily from the consciousness all sorts of painfully urgent matters.

To the unbeliever of course it all seems superstitious and a little absurd. What possible difference, demands the scoffer, can it possibly make to the order of the universe or the destiny of mankind that one set of pampered and overpaid athletes should vanquish another set? What possible glory, he asks, will accrue to the Borough of the Bronx if nine young men from such distant points as Massillon, Ohio; San Francisco, Calif., and St. Louis, Mo., prove themselves somewhat superior to nine others from such places as Louisville, Ky., and Los Angeles, Calif.? Or why should the Borough of Brooklyn rejoice madly if it proves the other way about?

To those outside the revelation, perhaps no really convincing answer can be made. Still, it is possible to approach the matter philosophically. Baseball is simply the liturgical expression of the pragmatic spirit. What works is right; what works best is eo nomine good, true, and beautiful. Now pragmatism is said by some to be merely a kind of secularized Calvinism; and certainly in the eschatology of baseball we find the same division of mankind into the elect and the reprobate. Moreover, the division is exquisitely simple and unmistakable. Those who win are in the way of salvation; those who lose, for whatever reason, are not. Thus, for example, the personal and professional merits of Mr. Joe Kuhel, many though they are, now avail him nothing. The boys, according to Mr. Griffith, just declined to work for him, and thus by unsearchable and immutable decree of the ochlocratic genius which guides these matters, he must be cast into exterior darkness.

It's all very sad when you come to think about it; for the business is so arranged that in order for somebody to win it is necessary that somebody else lose. How pleasant if it were like the Caucus Race in the nursery tale where everybody wins and nobody loses! But on that basis, we suspect, baseball would never have become the multi-million dollar industry that it is.

Pushing H. R. 6000

It is not to be supposed the Congress can revamp the social security system in time to hasten the end of the steel strike. The bill for this purpose, H. R. 6000 on which the House began its debate yesterday, covers more than 200 pages, and the committee report is still longer. Considerable time will be required for legislators to digest this complicated measure and pass judgment on it. But at least it can be passed by the House as a token of what Congress expects to do.

To be sure, the proposed liberalization of the old-age and survivors insurance program would not satisfy the steel workers if it were on the books. But it would lessen the intensity of the demand for large private pension and insurance benefits to be financed solely by the employer. The fact is that many unions are seeking special systems for the benefit of their members only because they have lost hope of bringing the Nation's general social security system up to reasonable standards of adequacy. This is frankly acknowledged by the Ways and Means Committee. "Without an adequate and universally applicable basic social insurance system," it advises the House, "the demands for security by segments of the population threaten to result in unbalanced, overlapping, and competing programs." It is about time for Congress to wake up to the fact that its delay in bringing the Social Security Act up to date is threatening to undermine that legislation.

There is, of course, another serious danger to the social security system, which is based on the sound principle of helping people to help themselves. That danger stands out sharply from the following comments in the Ways and Means report:

> The assistance program, instead of being reduced to a secondary position as was anticipated, still cares for a much larger number of people than the insurance program. Furthermore, the average payments under assistance have more than doubled in amount since 1939 while benefits under insurance have scarcely risen at all. There are indications that if the insurance program is not strengthened and expanded, the old-age assistance program may develop into a very costly and ill-advised system of noncontributory pensions, payable not only to the needy but to all individuals at or above retirement age who are no longer employed. Moreover, there are increasing pressures for special pensions for particular groups and particular hazards.

The question for Congress, therefore, is really whether the social security system shall be allowed to go to pieces. If it remains so inadequate as to encourage the development of all sorts of special little areas of social security based on the noncontributory principle, its chief element of strength will be lost. It seems to us that the superiority of a general system covering all workers who can reasonably be brought into it is indisputable. Such a system spreads the burden of social security over all industry. It generalizes benefits instead of permitting them to be concentrated in a few prosperous corporations. It enables workers to change jobs without losing their security. It conserves their independence and dignity because they contribute to the system and draw benefits from it as a matter of right. The desirability of extending such a system is evident without any reference to the current widespread demand for special pension plans, but these demands have made action by Congress especially urgent.

In addition to bringing 11 million new beneficiaries under the old-age and survivors insurance program, the House bill would increase the benefits by about 70 percent on the average. Of course, taxes on employers and employes to support the system would also be sharply increased, and the maximum sum of earnings on which contributions and benefits would be computed would be raised from $3000 to $3600. Some details of the bill are likely to be changed before its enactment, but there seems to be little doubt that a liberalized social security measure will be passed in some form. Industrial statesmanship on the part of both the steel companies and the union calls for a compromise of their dispute over pensions that will make allowance for a liberalized Federal pension system.

Export Wheat

So far as the United States is concerned, the main value of the International Wheat Agreement which this country signed last spring remains to be demonstrated. Activities under the agreement have been constricted because of the lack of any prescribed means of bridging the gap between the price of wheat in this country and the lower price at which the United States has agreed to sell wheat for export. Because the market price of wheat is now in the neighborhood of $2, congressional action is necessary to give the Department of Agriculture authority to meet the $1.80 a bushel ceiling price for the 168 million bushels which this country is to furnish annually under the agreement.

Neither of the two bills introduced in the Senate for this purpose seems to us a satisfactory answer. Senator Young's bill would make ECA the scapegoat by requiring it to purchase wheat from the Commodity Credit Corporation at the full market price for allocation to ECA countries participating in the wheat agreement. This would amount to a reduction in ECA funds available to those countries. It would be a particularly rank injustice because one of the reasons given by the House Appropriations Committee for whittling down the ECA appropriation in the first place was the potential saving to ECA countries under the wheat agreement.

The other bill, that introduced by Senator Elmer Thomas, is less objectionable in that it would not charge to foreign aid the expense of disposing of surplus American wheat. It would, however, require the Commodity Credit Corporation to furnish wheat at the lower price and absorb the differential. Even if a later appropriation made up the loss to CCC, the American contract under the wheat agreement is not strictly a price-support operation and cannot properly be listed as a price-support cost. What is necessary is a special fund specifically earmarked for operation of the wheat agreement, with authority for the CCC to use its present capital until the fund is available. The question is primarily one of bookkeeping, but it is important that the expenses of price support and of the wheat agreement be kept as separate items readily identifiable as such.

All Or Nothing

Participants in the atomic energy talks between the United States, Britain and Canada have emerged with the conviction that there must be either full three-nation cooperation or completely separate atomic programs. Halfway cooperation of the sort that obtains under the present limited exchange of information simply does not permit joint planning and the real interplay of ideas. It is as if Britain and Canada had been excluded from the inner mysteries of the lodge after they had helped write the ritual.

Realistically, there can be only one choice. If the world is now in an atomic arms race, the greatest strength of the Western nations lies in unity of effort. Opinions differ about the strategic value of the atomic bomb now that the Russians have perfected one; but the importance of the bomb as a tactical and defensive weapon is, if anything, increased and the need for increasing the stockpile remains urgent. And, as the former executive director of the interdepartmental committee on atomic energy in the military establishment, Dr. R. E. Lapp, in an interview with United States News and World Report, has observed, secrecy is now a sort of laugh. With respect to Britain and Canada certainly, the only effect a false emphasis on secrecy can have is to impede joint defenses.

Two major problems must be met in establishing full three-nation partnership. The first is to provide for genuine integration of the separate national programs. Division of effort is an essential to such integration, and in this respect a difficulty arises in the reported intention of the British to go ahead with their own atomic weapons project. There is, of course, little sense in mere duplication.

The United States can attempt to persuade the British but it cannot order them to desist. The best answer to British qualms would be the assurance of complete sharing of the benefits of the joint program. British scientists, for example, ought to work alongside Americans, and vice versa. Atomic defenses should be considered a common affair integrated with military planning under the Atlantic Pact.

The second problem is that of persuading Congress to amend the present law to facilitate such cooperation. Regardless of whether legally it is possible to interpret the McMahon Act as permitting a freer interchange of information, the popular impression is that the prohibitions of that act are absolute. The honest thing, as Secretary Acheson has recognized, is to present the considerations frankly to Congress. In this connection the Russian bomb is the most effective argument the Administration could have of the futility of atomic isolationism.

Change Of Venue

Whatever the legal technicalities, there are compelling common sense reasons to support the request for a change of venue made by the defense in the Alger Hiss perjury trial. That trial, scheduled to begin next Monday, is supposed to be conducted as if no previous trial had taken place. It would be difficult enough to give reality to this fiction in any jurisdiction inside the solar system. In New York, it would be patently impossible. Vermont, to which the defense has asked that the venue be changed, affords at least a fairer chance that the trial will be conducted in an atmosphere of impartiality.

Only the illiterate in New York City can have failed to read some portions of the more or less lurid accounts of the trial carried daily over a period of weeks in the New York newspapers. And the illiterates were no doubt given an impression of one sort or another by radio. As a result of this reporting and of the furious controversy that raged during and after the trial over the conduct of the prosecution, the defense, the judge and the jury, the search for 12 honestly detached and unprejudiced jurors would be more futile than the quest of Diogenes for an honest man.

Vermonters have heard about the Hiss case, too, of course. But it seems likely that they have heard about it with a great deal less excitement and personal involvement, and so would be better able to approach a retrial freshly and with independent judgment. It should be no small argument in favor of transferring the trial to Vermont that it can be conducted there without the flagrant press interference with the calm administration of justice that characterized the whole course of the first trial in New York. Since the prosecution is presumably more interested in the promotion of justice than in the mere conviction of the accused, we think it would do well to withdraw its opposition to the venue change.

Realistic Farm Prices

Mr. William R. Ronald, editor of the Daily Republic of Mitchell, S. Dak., in his letter published in your columns September 19, accuses me of broadcasting "misinformation" in my letter published September 6, in which I made the estimate that corn could be grown in modern mechanized farming for a total cost of about 50 cents per bushel as opposed to the present extortionate farm support prices of about $1.45.

He contends such a cost figure is "ridiculous" because the Illinois State Agriculture College announced several years ago that a bushel of corn took from the soil nutrients that would require 40 cents to replace them, or about 75 cents at today's prices.

The intelligent farmer can, by proper farming methods and control of erosion, maintain or even increase the nitrogen content of his land without spending a cent on expensive synthetic nitrogen fertilizers. Further Nature has been for thousands of years laying down strata of rich alluvial topsoils containing all the essentials for plant growth. With good farming and conservation practice this land will go on producing with practically undiminished output for centuries without the need for artificial fertilizers.

Mr. Ronald's implied contention that the 75-cent per bushel of corn grown depreciation of farm land should be reckoned as a true cost is ridiculous or even preposterous. Farmers would be amortizing the total cost of their land every three or four years were such a cost allowable.

The cost of fertilizer, if and when used, is a capital improvement cost much the same as a new machine installed in an industrial plant to improve production, but farmers are permitted to enter it as a cost of doing business, and hence it becomes fully deductible from income in the current year.

"For Whites Only"

A Negro, I am irritated by the consistently specious quality of our local advertising. "By all means try the old seafood platter," we are encouraged by a voice which describes a given restaurant via local radio station. The arbitrary but never expressed addendum, "If you are white" has yet to be uttered by the charming voice.

"Apply for a large account by mail," beseeches the department store business office—but never with the reservation, "If you are a Negro your chances are slim, good credit rating or not." "Drive in" daily solicits the outdoor theater, the pleasant-looking tavern, the one amusement park with the merry-go-round. And again the silent censor, "If you are white."

Recently on a local radio program a representative of the American Red Cross Gray Ladies auxiliary organization gave an intelligent explanation of the group's work. At the end of the program the speaker indicated that a woman who wished to qualify for service should be between the ages of 21 and 55, and would be expected to take and pass a training course as prescribed by the organization. There was no reference to color qualifications. Yet, just a few months ago a distinguished Negro woman, wife of an Army officer and mother of a brilliant son engaged as research worker and college professor, was denied membership in the Gray Ladies Auxiliary.

We should insist that all advertising and soliciting agents and agencies should proclaim flatly, "This is for whites only."

Palestine Students

I have just read Mr. Joe Nuseibeh's September 30 letter concerning the sad plight of Palestine students. His last statement proved most interesting. He said, "I feel strongly that we have a right to expect a helping hand from the United States."

By what right does this young man "expect a helping hand"? His nation has gone through hard times, I admit. But there are countless thousands of deserving Americans who cannot even afford to go to college.

Our Government should be more discriminating in the choice of exchange students. A bond or initial cash outlay held for such emergencies and refunded if not used might be the solution. I feel very strongly against people who come here expecting America to owe them a living.

Unratified Treaties

The most important news item this year to me is not the fact that the Russians have exploded the atom bomb. It is a little item in Drew Pearson's column declaring that Judge Goldsborough questions the constitutionality of agreements with foreign powers which have not been ratified by the Senate.

In denying the current practice of interpreting the Constitution in the light of the exigencies of the moment as viewed through the all-seeing eyes of our infallible leaders, the good judge is guilty of heresy. I strongly suspect that his insistence that the writers of this document meant what they said and in the words they originally said it, bodes ill for the judge's further progress in the judicial hierarchy.

If the Constitution's dictates had been observed, there might have been no agreements of Yalta and Tehran to plague us. And without these agreements, we would have had no Marshall Plan and no rearming of Europe, with its prelude to a third war. And all because our Constitution in its demand that foreign treaties and agreements be ratified by the Senate in its effort to guard the people against leaders with a Messiah complex, was not taken literally but 'interpreted with fluidity."

Constitution Distorted

I am a family tradition Democrat, not any kind of mugwump Democrat, the kind that is constantly using some sort of alias because of an apparent unwillingness to use a name that they are perverting, or because they do not follow Jefferson and Jackson though they constantly use their names to raise money and to get votes from the unsuspecting and the label followers. The real Democrats are constantly being belabored by this element to whom the word Democrat is either foreign or painful to mention, and it is fast becoming exasperating to the real core of our old party.

We are fast heading for a complete "welfare state" and "statism" is therefore a living specter. I note that it is said that all this is done to carry out 'the general welfare mandate in the Constitution," and those who want us to "forget the language of the Constitution," "are just about 160 years behind the times." When these neo-Democrats, who parade under a lot of aliases, refer to the Constitution I fear they are treading on unfamiliar ground. They have twisted and contorted the commerce and so-called general welfare clauses completely out of the meaning.

Woodrow Wilson, in Constitutional Government in the United States, in 1911, in disposing of the "question of whether Congress through its power over interstate commerce could 'regulate the conditions of labor in field and factory,'" replied: "Certainly not, I should say; and I should think that any thoughtful lawyer who felt himself at liberty to be frank would agree with me . . . If the Federal power does not end with the regulation of the actual movement of trade, it ends nowhere and the line between State and Federal jurisdiction is obliterated." That is pretty clear language.

Now, let us come down to 1932, and see what the tutelary deity of the New Deal (Roosevelt) says on that subject. In campaigning he solemnly told the world that Congress has no power over a great number of vital problems, "such as the conduct of public utilities, of insurance, of business, of agriculture, of education, of social welfare and a dozen other important features." That is a pretty comprehensive description of the limitations upon the Federal Government. Merlo Pusey has remarked that "Since then (1936) the inflation of the commerce clause has been truly phenomenal." So, therefore, we must number Roosevelt and Wilson, when not laboring under political necessities, among those who are "about 160 years behind the times." So much for the commerce clause.

Those of us who believe that the words "general welfare," as found in the Constitution, are not words of grant, but are words of limitation upon power, are referred to as those who "forgot the language of the Constitution." We are quite content to be classified with the Father of the Constitution, James Madison, as he expressed himself in Article XLI of the Federalist. He there said that "It has been urged and echoed that the power 'to lay and collect taxes, duties, impost, and excises, to pay the debts, and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States,' amounts to an unlimited commission to exercise every power which may be alleged to be necessary for the common defense or general welfare. No stronger proof could be given of the distress under which these writers labor for objections, than their stooping to such misconstruction." He then went on to demonstrate the fallacy of those who were making "very fierce attack against the Constitution" with that and such arguments. If those who harken back to the Constitution want to really know the true meaning of the words "general welfare," they could do well to read the balance of Article XLI.

It gets pretty tiresome to have to listen to the politicians of this period prating about the Constitution, which is mentioned only to be ignored in the everyday exercise of power. I repeat the words of Wilson, "that any thoughtful lawyer who feels himself at liberty to be frank would agree with me" that those who use the words "commerce" and "general welfare" in order to do that which the Founding Fathers said the Constitution did not authorize, are perverting that instrument to their own political purposes.

What Nomads Bring Back

By Malvina Lindsay

Travelogue Time

NEVER HAS the country had so many amateur Marco Polos return with tales of their adventures. Travel experts say the "greatest mass movement of humans in the world's history" has taken place this year, much of it caused by vacation journeys of Americans. Hence the fall settling down of a Nation that has been in unprecedented flux even to the ends of the earth is causing appraisal of the gifts brought back from Carcassonne.

These include more than the usual perfume, wearing apparel, trinkets, antiques, souvenirs and snapshots. For whether a traveler went to Chicago or Cairo, he was bound to get some new impact from the restless, disturbed mind of the world. Despite the cynics, he was bound to come back talking of something besides what he ate.

True, food figures high in any returned vacationist's travelogue. Small wonder! For if he went abroad, he was likely to encounter the novelty of food scarcity in many places. But even more novel, he found that getting a meal of quality at a reasonable price in small town or roadside restaurant was almost impossible in this land of food surpluses. A taste and digestion for hamburger sandwiches and candy bars remain the best equipment of the vacationing motorist.

CYNICS also insist that all this summer moving about of people merely supplies them with chatter of their mileage and statistics concerning the physical wonders they saw. It is true that minds are not often enlarged, provinciality and prejudice swept away in a two-week motor rush from one State to another, an 18-day Caribbean cruise, or a six-week jump about Europe. But those returning from cross-country jaunts frequently reveal a greater awareness of the geographical unity of their country, have a greater sense of identity with their Nation. Those who have traveled farther usually get some new perspective on the smallness of the world, of the physical nearness of other nations.

One deep impression seems to have been made on many American tourists who went abroad. That was the great extremes of wealth and poverty that existed side by side in many countries. It left some of them wondering and uneasy—as well it might. Many American tourists also have come home puzzled at the absence of a middle class in many foreign countries, indeed in much of Europe. This, too, has made them think.

BUT WHAT did foreign peoples think of the swarms of "average" Americans, so unlike the lush tourists of prewar days, who descended on their countries during the last few months? Only an army of pollsters could answer. However, from scattered reports we get some clews.

The pace of activity by Americans abroad, especially in Paris, caused much wonder. American rush and gusto were felt all over Europe. And thanks to mass production of clothing, all of these average Americans, including those who watched their pennies the most closely, looked prosperous. In rural England there was much surprise over the neat business suits and grooming of a delegation of Illinois farmers studying British agriculture. Britishers who had expected to see obviously rural types found instead, as a village postmaster expressed it, "Clark Gables."

One recurrent unfavorable note was heard about American women's informal and exposed dressing on the streets of foreign cities. In the Montreal City Council, a proposal was made that paper boleros be provided feminine visitors with low-cut sunback dresses. Another unfavorable comment on American tourists has been their disregard for social customs of the places they visit.

However, on the whole, these average Americans made a good impression and did much to refute detractors' propaganda that they would be tipplers, vulgarians in speech and action, and moronic addicts of comic books. Many of them profited by study of a passport booklet explaining the Marshall Plan in simple language and providing answers to the false statements made about it in Europe. They were able, by this and other means, to be good ambassadors for their country. These are the tourists who have brought back a better interpretation of the world abroad to the relatives, friends and neighbors to whom they are now showing their Kodak pictures and home movies.

Green Lights

There is a short notice in the October Reader's Digest headed: "Green Lights Mean Danger." It says that: "the danger ratio at light-controlled crossings, in terms of deaths, was 8.65 times higher than at unmarked and unguarded crossings in the city." (Wilmington, Del.) "We must change our thinking on traffic controls," says E. F. Koester, Wilmington's chief engineer.

The present traffic control signals are the most senseless methods I know of! Now drivers have to make a left hand turn in the face of oncoming traffic! One has to take his chances to turn in front of traffic speeding through by the green light! A red light would stop traffic, and one could make a left-hand turn in safety.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

"All Aid Short Of War"

THERE is a simple measure of the somber reality behind the apparently quiet facade of the cold war. The possibility of a Russian attack on Yugoslavia is taken sufficiently seriously so that an agreed Anglo-American policy has been evolved to meet this eventuality. This policy can be summed up in five drearily familiar words: "all aid short of war."

This decision has been reached in the endless conferences which always accompany a major policy decision. There have been long conversations between British officials and their opposite numbers in the State Department. Robert Reams, able counselor of embassy in Belgrade, and one of the chief architects of American Yugoslav policy, has made a flying trip to Washington to give his advice in person. Secretary of State Dean Acheson has threshed the matter out in talks with both President Harry Truman and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin. And the Yugoslav crisis has also been considered at length in the National Security Council.

As a result, important conclusions have been reached. Both Americans and British agree that they cannot sit idly by if Yugoslavia is attacked. But it is also agreed that an automatic comguerilla attacks. As for the Sodefense is out of the question. For one thing, it is obvious that the western European allies in the Atlantic Pact would hardly be eager to defend Tito at the price of a Europe overrun by the Red army.

Thus for the present, only an "all aid short of war" policy is practical. If the Red army attacks, the Soviet Union will promptly be condemned as an aggressor before the United Nations. Economic support for Tito will then be redoubled, and military equipment of every sort will be sent to Tito's armies.

IT HAS been necessary to arrive at an agreed policy in case of a Russian attack on Tito simply because Act I in the Soviet-Yugoslav drama is now clearly about played out. Tito has had a 25-million-dollar loan from the Export-Import Bank. The British are arranging an eight to nine million pound credit. Both the British and the Italians are now negotiating very extensive trade agreements with Yugoslavia. And this economic support for the rebellious Tito has already had the consequences which the wisest of the policy-makers have long predicted.

The Yugoslav dictator has felt strong enough to defy the Kremlin with an audacity which has won gasps of reluctant admiration from Western observers. In Belgrade, Tito and his followers have unforgivably described the "degeneration" of the Soviet Communist Party, and have more unforgivably accused the Russians of wanting to dominate the world.

In New York, Tito's top diplomatic team has publicly broken with the Soviets in the United Nations. Moreover, Tito is known to have conferred very great authority on his chief plenipotentiary, Foreign Secretary Edward Kardelj, including the authority to arrange the Soviet Union before the Security Council if there are real signs that the Kremlin intends to move from threats to action.

Thus it is clear that the Kremlin cannot deal with Tito by mere political pressure and economic strangulation, and the stage is set for Act II.

THE AMERICAN and British experts have been canvassing all the forms which Act II may take. And they have reached a unanimous conclusion. The Kremlin will only destroy Titoism, which is like a cancer eating into the whole structure of Soviet power, if the Kremlin is willing to risk using the Red army.

There is no other way. With Anglo-American support, Tito can continue to withstand indefinitely the kind of pressure now being brought to bear against him. Tito's Moscow-trained secret police have already demonstrated that they can deal with Moscow-inspired sabotage or guerilla attacks. As for the Soviet satellite armies, Tito's 30-division army would, in the words of one of the experts, "give them a bloody nose."

That leaves the Red army. So far, according to reliable intelligence reports, Red army troop movements on the Yugoslav frontier have been a bluff. Soviet units have been moved about as ostentatiously as possible, as a psychological device in the Kremlin's war of nerves. A real buildup for an attack on Yugoslavia would require weeks of mobilization and stockpiling. The intelligence experts thus believe that the West will have at least a month's warning if the Kremlin decides to attack, and there is still no evidence that this decision has been made.

Yet just because the job of destroying Tito can be done in no other way, none of the experts rules out the possibility of an overt attack. It is quite clear that if the Red army moves, a policy of "all aid short of war" may in the end lead to a world war. But that is a risk which must be taken. Those who should know believe that the Kremlin will attack Tito only if there is every likelihood of a quick and purely local war. Thus the best chance of avoiding war is to make it clear to the hard-headed men in the Kremlin that an attack on Tito will involve very grave risks indeed.

Washington Calling

Operation Survival

IN THE interval since President Truman's fateful announcement of Russia's atomic explosion, a spate of words has deluged this country, coming from every possible source. But there have been few signs of any positive action.

Childs

On the matter of action both the President and his top military planners are somewhat sensitive. Almost without exception the President's visitors, whether they have come to see him about a new dam for Goose Creek or a postmaster in Podunk, eventually bring up the momentous news.

The President has a stock answer. He says there has been no need to change our course or take any drastic steps because we have known all along that the Russians would get the bomb and American policy and planning have been based on that assumption.

Statements that the military had based their calculations on a belief that the Russians would not have an atomic weapon before 1952 are somewhat resented. Top military planners say this is untrue. Their calculations were that Russia would not have a stockpile of atom bombs before 1952. There is, of course, a wide difference between one atomic explosion and a stockpile.

The target date for completion of the radar fence around North America, it is pointed out, was 1952. This was on the assumption that Russia would have a number of bombs by that time and perhaps be emboldened to launch an aggressive war.

AS A RESULT of the atomic explosion in Russia's secret Siberian testing ground, military planners have concluded that more urgent action is essential in three departments. As outlined by those responsible for our military security, they are as follows:

1. To speed up construction of the radar fence. While Congress has authorized the entire project, appropriations have been slow in coming. This has meant delays in building the major listening posts, which require solid and substantial installations. Congress will be asked to speed up the money for this electronic warning barrier.

2. Civil defense. Almost nothing has been done in this department and it is a source of concern to the military planning staff.

They are concerned mainly on two points. One is the effect on the civilian population of a few bombings by suicide squadrons, which is all the Russians are believed capable of at the present time. Second is internal sabotage by Communist fifth columns, particularly in key war industries. Industrial leaders attending recent orientation conferences at the Pentagon have been warned to spot potential saboteurs in their plants.

When the late Secretary of Defense James Forrestal created the Office of Civil Defense Planning in March, 1948, he was accused of warmongering. After study conducted in cooperation with States and municipalities, a report was turned over to President Truman. Nothing further happened until the President ordered the National Security Resources Board to make further studies. Now military men feel the time has come for something more than study and they are hopeful that the public will understand the necessity for positive steps to set up at least in skeleton form civilian defense units throughout the country.

3. THE OBVIOUS necessity to increase and improve atomic production in every phase. Because it is so obvious, the steps here can readily be taken and the machinery already has been put in motion.

This is all on the rudimentary military level. On the diplomatic side, the American people have every right to expect that privately and without fanfare the State Department is exploring with Soviet diplomats the possibilities for a limited agreement with the USSR which might serve until long-term provisions for control and inspection can be discussed.

It may be that no realistic agreement whatsoever will be possible. But the American people—the American conscience, and, for that matter, the conscience of the Western World—will not be satisfied until every avenue has been thoroughly and honestly explored.

A book has just been published with the striking title, Operation Survival, written by foreign affairs expert William H. Hessler. As Hessler makes clear in what should be "must" reading for every member of Congress and almost everyone else concerned with America's position in the world today, there is no single easy way to peace and security. Although the awareness of it is only growing, what we are literally engaged in is Operation Survival.

12 Pact Nations Begin Plan for Defense Today

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

High officials and ranking generals of the Atlantic Pact countries will take the first formal steps this week, beginning today, toward planning western Europe's defense against a possible Soviet invasion.

Their aim is to work out one unified plan under which each of the 12 countries will have its assigned job in defending the North Atlantic area.

The first meetings, necessarily, will decide how the planning shall be done rather than what the plan shall be. Still, the start of the process will mark at least two historic changes in the policies of the United States, Canada, and the western European countries.

New Step for U. S.

For the United States it will involve taking an active part for the first time, instead of being just an "observer" or an outsider, in the planning of European defense.

For the European countries, as well as for the United States and Canada, it will mean planning defense in common instead of on a basis of each nation for itself.

Both changes were implied in the North Atlantic Pact of last spring, under which all the signers agreed that an attack on one would be regarded as an attack on all.

Although a complete defense plan will take many months and perhaps years to work out, the principle of integrated Atlantic defense will have to be accepted quickly. For Congress provided last month that 900 million dollars' worth of American arms and other military aid could not be made available until the recipient countries had agreed to an integrated defense effort.

Committee to Be Named

Defense ministers and other officials of the pact countries, under the chairmanship of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, will have what is expected to be a brief, cut-and-dried meeting at the Pentagon this afternoon. One item of business will be to appoint their chiefs of staff as members of a continuing military committee.

It will be up to this military committee to work out the necessary integration and to decide, in time, what role each country shall play in defending the vast area covered by the Atlantic Pact. The military committee, with Gen. Omar Bradley as its American member, plans to meet later in the week and to continue its sessions until Monday.

By the time the chiefs of staff finish this series of meetings, the United States, Britain and France probably will have named the officers to represent them on the all-important standing group of three men, the kingpin of all the committees to be set up under the pact. This three-man group will have its headquarters here and will correspond in some ways to the Combined Chiefs of Staff Committee that coordinated American and British strategic planning during the war.

The recent "atomic explosion" in Russia is bound to give a new sense of urgency to the defense planning, but is not expected to speed up the timetable of the 12 countries.

Plans Declared Unchanged

Secretary Johnson told members of the Senate and House Appropriations Committee in a closed session yesterday that American defense plans were unchanged by the Soviet explosion.

He made no request for more money, and told reporters afterward: "It is a great tribute to the Joint Chiefs of Staff that we don't have to ask for any more funds."

The Secretary said he still favored the 48-group air force approved by the Senate rather than the 58-group force voted by the House.

In the same way, an informed source said yesterday, the Atlantic Pact countries were just as exposed to attack, and had just as much need of defense, before the blast in Russia as now. The speediest possible defense planning was a part of the 12 governments' calculation when they signed the Atlantic pact last spring, months before the Soviet explosion.

Military supplies from the United States probably cannot start moving across the Atlantic until January, according to one authority, and even then in comparatively small quantities.

Army Leaders Consider Draft Reactivation

By Robert S. Allen

Army chiefs are considering reactivating Selective Service early next year.

Two reasons are behind this contemplated move:

1. Fear that unless the system is operating, Congress may refuse to renew it when it expires next June 24.

2. Growing indications of a slackening in enlistments.

The military is also itching to make another try to put over universal training. But there is no chance of doing that in this Congress, particularly with 1950 an election year. President Truman is still strong for UMT, but even he has made no effort to take it off the shelf. It is certain to remain there, barring an emergency.

Enlistments for all the armed services averaged about 40,000 a month during the past summer. That is sufficient for their needs. But earlier, the inflow was below this minimum level and recently there have been indications of a resumption of this downward trend.

Improved employment conditions are believed to be an important factor in this.

The military is emphatic about the need to retain Selective Service, even in dormant form. The leaders contend that without it, Army and Navy strength is certain to slump. The Air Force and Marines have no difficulty getting sufficient recruits. But the other two services, particularly the Army, insist Selective Service is essential to maintain their manpower.

They hold that even in suspended form, Selective Service is a decisive influence in keeping up voluntary enlistments.

French Here Carry 5 Pickets For Garry Davis From Embassy

Five conscientious objectors—one of them a woman—yesterday were bodily ejected from the French Embassy and then, with seven others, arrested for picketing within 500 feet of an embassy.

Rawlins

The woman, Miss Winifred Kate Rawlins, 42, booked as a domestic, described the ouster this way:

"One man picked me up and carried me to the door. Then, when I sat down again, two men carried me outside. They were extremely gentle and friendly."

All 12 pickets, 10 from New City and two from Glen Gardner, N. J., arrived at the chancery of the French Embassy, 2535 Belmont rd. nw., about 1 p.m. to protest the trial in Paris of Garry Davis, son of Washington Orchestra Leader Meyer Davis, who has declared himself a "World Citizen."

'Stay on French Soil'

Davis is on trial, the pickets said, because he is supporting Jean Moreau, an imprisoned French conscientious objector. Now in jail himself, they said, Davis is threatened with banishment from France for his support of Moreau.

While seven remained outside picketing, the five gained entrance to the French Embassy with a letter to Ambassador Henri Bonnet expressing their stand. The letter was accepted for the Ambassador by an embassy employe, according to Jean Baube, press counselor.

At this point, Baube said, the objectors announced their intention of "staying 24 hours on French soil to protest Garry Davis' trial."

"We gave them five minutes to leave," the press counselor related. "We knew we'd need that room." When they refused and began a sitdown strike, Baube and three or four other embassy employes began carrying them outside, he said.

One of the five, George Houser, 32, said there was no trouble in their ejection. "We simply went limp," he reported. "We are committed to nonviolence."

Another, however, found himself booked on disorderly conduct charges as well when he lay down in the embassy driveway and refused to budge. He is David Dellinger, 34, whose occupation was listed as a printer.

The Embassy also called the State Department to notify it of the situation, Baube related. A Thirteenth Precinct squad car with Pvts. David Gould and R. C. Roehn arrived soon after, and all 12 pickets were arrested.

One Posts Collateral

They were booked at the station house and then, with the exception of Miss Rawlins, were transported to police headquarters to be fingerprinted and photographed. Miss Rawlins was taken to the Women's Bureau.

Only one picket, the Rev. Abraham J. Muste, 60, posted $100 collateral. The remainder refused bond and were detained pending a hearing at 10a. m. today in Municipal Court. They will be represented by Attorney Benjamin C. Sigal.

The pickets told reporters they were representatives of three New York groups—the Fellowship of Reconciliation, of which Muste is executive secretary, the War Resisters League, and the Peacemakers.

Garry Davis Found Guilty, Will Go Free

Paris, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—"World citizen" Garry Davis was found guilty today of living in France without a permit and sentenced retroactively to eight days in jail.

He will be freed tonight since he already has served that time awaiting trial. The court said "extenuating circumstances" made possible a sentence of only eight days."

The court's action made it possible for Minister of Interior Jules Moch to expel Davis from the country. Moch has not indicated that he would do so.

Douglas May Quit Hospital in 'Couple of Weeks'

Yakima, Wash., Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Dr. W. Schuler Ginn, personal physician of Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, said tonight the jurist might be released from St. Elizabeth's Hospital here after "a couple of weeks time."

He added that Douglas was not expected to undergo surgery.

The 50-year-old jurist, hurt when thrown by his horse in the hills, today received a telegram from President Truman reading:

"I want you to know I am thinking of you as you suffer this painful ordeal. Keep your courage up and we'll all hope for better days soon."

Tucker Car Stockholders Offer Reorganization Plan

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—Four jurors, three of them women, were selected today as the trial of eight promoters of the Tucker Corp. began. The defendants are charged with mail fraud and violation of the Federal Securities Act.

One prospective juror was dismissed by the Government when he volunteered, "I was surprised to learn that this is a criminal prosecution."

And while jury veniremen were being examined for the criminal proceedings, new salvage moves developed in a second District Courtroom of the old Federal Building.

Judge Michael L. Igoe signed an order canceling the corporation's lease on a huge, Government-owned war plant. And, in Judge Igoe's presence, a group of Tucker stockholders submitted a reorganization plan for the company to its court-appointed trustees.

The order turning the giant former Dodger-Chrysler plant back to the War Assets Administration canceled a lease calling for rent payments of $19,200,000 during the next eight years. It gave the trustees 60 days in which to try to make new arrangements with the WAA for use of the plant, or a portion of it.

The reorganization plan, first to be offered since the court took over the organization's affairs last spring, calls for raising forty million dollars, half from the Reconstruction Finance Cororation, and most of the rest from sale of stock in a successor firm to be called the New Tucker Corporation.

Attorney Warren H. Orr, who submitted the plan, declared it would permit the firm to start mass production of automobiles in 90 days, and finance the output of sixty thousand cars during the first year's production.

Holders of the company's present class A $5 par value stock who obtained their shares before March 3, 1948 would be permitted to turn in their certificates and $5 per share for the new $10 par value stock. An issue of fifty thousand shares was proposed. Those with class A stock obtained after March 3, 1948 would be allowed only 50 cents a share on an exchange for new stock—paying $9.50 a share.

Other money would be raised by selling Air Cooled Motors, Inc., a Syracuse subsidiary of Tucker, collecting outstanding notes from potential distributors and dealers, and reclaiming $1,275,000 deposited with the WAA as surety on the plant lease.

The trial of Preston Tucker and the seven other present or former officials was begun at 10:08 a. m. by District Judge Walter J. Labuy, speaking into the microphone of a public address system installed in the cavernous courtroom especially for the trial.

It marked the start of a court battle which attorneys estimated may last until Christmas.

Tucker, looking natty in a blue suit, arrived at the courthouse in one of his hand-made automobiles with his wife, Vera. The other defendants also were there.

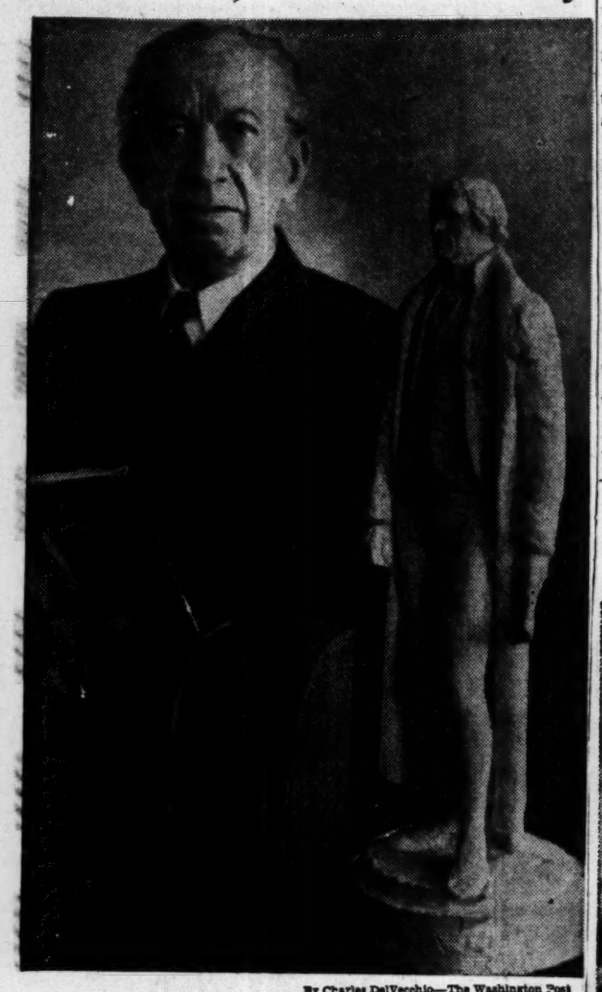
Jefferson Memorial Sculptor, Back Home, Frets at Inactivity



By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

RUDULPH EVANS, sculptor of Washington's Jefferson Memorial, is now making his home at 1700 16th st. nw. Also shown is his statue of Thomas Jefferson

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

If the mammoth figure of Thomas Jefferson near the Tidal Basin were alive—as many say it seems to be—the great Virginian would be keeping watch over the man who sculptured him for posterity.

By design, the Jefferson Memorial faces north to fit in the L'Enfant five-point plan with the Washington Monument, the White House, the Lincoln Memorial and the Capitol.

By coincidence it faces the 16th st. apartment of a restless, 71-year-old artist who has returned to his native Washington, which he left at 26 to carve his name among the great.

Inactivity Is Telling

Rudolph Evans hasn't taken a chisel in hand for about four years now, and the inactivity, he will confess, is telling on him.

"Sometimes I just can't wait to tackle a big statue," is the way he describes his condition.

Sculptor Evans hasn't retired. He is recuperating from a painful spinal condition, aggravated no little by four years of working night and day on the statue of Jefferson.

His many prize-winning works are in the realistic, lifelike tradition, which he feels expresses the warmth and character of his subjects.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans are living at 1700 16th st. nw. until they find a permanent apartment. They recently sold their six-story home and studio at 71 Washington pl., New York City.

It was there that many notables sat under the skylight in his 100-foot-long studio, "where you can stand off and look at the silhouette of your work, which is the important thing."

Baruch Arrived Too Early

It was there that Bernard Baruch sat for his bronze portrait in 1937. In fact, Evans believes, that occasion was probably the beginning of the elder statesman's penchant for park-bench sitting.

Baruch had arrived too early for the sitting and was asked to return later. He disappeared for two hours and came back with a glowing account of a conversation with a hobo on a Central Park bench.

Then there was the time Evans sculptured a classical nude, "Maiden With Swans," for John D. Rockefeller's garden.

The younger Rockefeller suggested an elaborate arrangement of fountains to serve as a setting. His father was shocked, Evans recalls, to the point of asking:

"Who do you think we are, the Vanderbilts?"

Sculptor Evans remembers well, too, his studies (when he was 18) at the Corcoran Art School here, at the Art Students League in New York, and at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. He was a pupil in France of Rodin and Saint-Gaudens.

Sing Sing Convicts To Hear Series

Ossining, N. Y., Oct. 4 (AP).—It will be less work and more play-by-play for Sing Sing Prison inmates during the World Series.

Warden William E. Snyder said the prison factories will shut down at game time as long as the series lasts. He said the inmates will listen to the Yankees-Dodgers broadcasts over radio amplifiers installed in the prison yard.

Soviet A-Bomb Surprised Few In America, Survey Shows

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 4.—Russia's possession of the atom bomb hardly came as much of a surprise to the American people.

Most of them figured as far back as two years ago that the Russians had the A-bomb secret. That probably explains why the American public accepted President Truman's announcement recently about the Russian bomb so calmly.

In October, 1947—two years ago almost to the week—the American Institute of Public Opinion asked a cross-section of the Nation's voters:

"Do you think any other country is already making atom bombs?"

The voters who were interviewed replied:

Yes	59%
No	33
No opinion	8

Those who replied "yes" were asked, "What country?"

Most of them said Russia.

What the public's reaction will be now that the Russian bomb is a known fact will be shown in a series of surveys which are soon to be started by the institute.

But here are the highlights of public reaction to the whole issue of atomic energy as shown in surveys up to the present:

1. The majority of voters have expressed the belief that scientists will be able to develop a defense against the bomb.

2. The public has consistently felt that the atom bomb does not make large and powerful armies or navies obsolete.

3. Approximately one adult in ten in cities of half a million population or more had, by August, 1948, given some thought to moving elsewhere to escape the dangers of a possible atom bomb attack.

4. The awesome destructiveness of the bomb has made a deep impression on the public mind. In 1947 the great majority of voters questioned said the destructive power of the bomb seemed greater than they had at first thought.

5. No need for a change in attitude toward Russia if she developed the atom bomb was seen by voters polled in 1947.

6. Concerning a third world war, the weight of sentiment has been that the discovery of the atom bomb decreases the possibility of another armed conflict, on the ground that fear of retaliation would discourage nations from attacking one another.

7. The average voter is optimistic about the development of atomic energy for peaceful industrial uses.

8. A few weeks before the announcement of the Russian A-bomb the public voted against the United States sharing atomic energy secrets with England.

Phone Call Saves Cuban Senator's Yacht

Miami, Fla., Oct. 4 (AP).—A last-minute call from Washington yesterday saved Cuban Senator Jose M. Aleman's $250,000 yacht from formal seizure by deputy United States marshals.

Assistant United States Attorney Fred W. Botts said a telephone call from Justice Department admiralty officials came in only 30 minutes before he was to file a libel against the luxury craft, Chanticleer.

Botts said he was told to delay all action for two weeks because "more peace overtures have been made."

Montgomery Late With 20,000 Bills

The deadline for tax payments without addition of interest charges has been extended for about 20,000 Montgomery County property owners because they have not yet received their bills.

This was made known yesterday by Alexander K. Hancock, county finance director, in a report to the County Council.

The 20,000 bills represent the portion of the county's 65,000 bills which were not mailed out by September 30, Hancock said. Persons receiving these bills have 30 days from the date of mailing to make payments, he said, before interest charges will be added.

Three Months Ahead of 1948

Despite the lag in preparing tax forms this year, the work is proceeding at a rate three months in advance of last year's, according to Hancock. He blamed the delay on the great increase in new construction in the county.

The return from bills already mailed out is very good, the finance director said.

"Since the middle of last month we have been collecting in excess of $50,000 a day and several days have totaled more than $150,000," he said.

The council approved a policy recommended by County Attorney David Macdonald for conduct of street improvements in the Silver Spring and Bethesda areas.

Present System Formalized

The policy, which represents formalizing of the unofficial manner of handling such matters at present, provides that: proposals may be initiated either by property owners or the Department of Public Works; costs will be charged on a front-foot benefit assessment basis (where only abutting property benefits, assessments will be made against such property), and hearings on improvements will be held or presentation of all data on the proposals before final council action.

A report of a recent county jail inspection by the Federal Bureau of Prisons was received by the council. The report recommended some improvements, but stated the entire unit is much cleaner than at the last inspection.

Talk, Tackle Foil Would-Be Bridge Leaper

An Army colonel's psychological line of chatter early yesterday riveted the attention of a would-be suicide, about to plunge from Key Bridge, long enough for police to effect a rescue.

The officer, Col. Theodore Fischer, 39, in charge of Army dental research at th. Bureau of Standards, was driving across the bridge toward Washington shortly after 1 a. m. when he saw a man standing on the four-foot guard rail on the east side of the span, midway between Virginia and District shores.

When Fischer stopped his car to investigate, he said, the man, later identified as John Edward Haynes, 33, of 54 Underwood pl. nw., shouted: "Stay there! Don't come near me!"

Fischer remained seated in his car as the other methodically removed coat and tie.

"Why don't you come home and have a drink with me?" the officer suggested, sparring for time. "Maybe we can straighten out your trouble."

"I've got more trouble than you or anyone else can straighten out," came the answer. "The only way out is to jump."

"Well," pointed out Fischer, trying a new tack, "It's awful black and cold down there."

Haynes looked hesitantly over the side but did not budge.

In the meantime police had been notified by some unidentified passer-by, and while the colloquy was in progress, a scout car carrying Pvts. Raymond A. Doyon and John J. Daly was speeding to the scene. Shortly after Doyon and Daly arrived other scout cars pulled up and a crowd of curious gathered.

Efforts of the reinforcements to wheedle Haynes into abandoning his plunge were getting nowhere when Fischer spoke up:

"Well, if you are going to jump, wouldn't you like a cigarette first?"

Haynes agreed that he would, but cautioned Fischer not to come near. The latter placed a cigarette and a lighter on the parapet. Haynes turned slowly to pick them up.

As he moved, Doyan leaped at him and with a flying tackle brought the man crashing to the concrete. The latter was uninjured but Doyan suffered a cut eye.

'Smokey Stover' Creator Gets Rich Turning Hogs Into Corn

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Bill Holman, creator of the world's zaniest comic strip, is as screwball as "Smokey Stover" himself.

He is also the undisputed American master of the pun—a form of humor he has elegantly exploited into a highly successful career.

Holman, in town with some 50 other leading cartoonists to boost the sale of U. S. Savings Bonds, yesterday unleashed for readers of The Washington Post some puns he plans to use in the strip in the next several months.

One is "bathtub gin" and will depict a couple sitting in a bathtub playing gin rummy.

He Hates to Do Such Things

"That's so stupid I have to use it . . .," said Holman, and immediately previewed another:

"Celebrating on the Fifth"—this will show a man jumping hilariously up and down on a bottle of Scotch.

"That's so stupid, I'm ashamed of it . . . "

Holman is a little stub of a man, baldheaded except for a fringe around the sides, and with a cigar perpetually in his hand. He is 46 and started drawing when he was 12. After naming his screwey fireman "Smokey" when he first started the strip 15 years ago, he thought of a smoking stove and, whish, had the full name.

"I've got this series I'm planning to use on the hog," Holman revealed, and furnished some samples:

"Hog-call": This will show a hog all slicked up in tuxedo and pressing a doorbell as he prepares to make a neighborly call.

A Tie in the Oinkment

"Hog-tie": A hog in front of a mirror tying his four-in-hand.

"Hog-wash:" A hog hanging out his wash on a clothesline.

"They're so stupid," Holman said, rotating his cigar in his mouth, . . . "but people seem to like it."

People like it so much that the strip has founded a national pun cult. Readers themselves furnish a good proportion of them—some come to Holman illustrated even. His files bulge with literally thousands of puns.

Also through his strip Holman has erected a whole dynasty of barroom, etc., decoration. Plastic wall replicas of some of his classic scenes are now being manufactured, to go on the market by Christmas.

A sample is the piece consisting of two framed pictures to be hung side by side: In one a man's beard is sticking out of the frame. From the adjoining frame another man is reaching out with a pair of scissors to clip the beard.

Some other puns coming up before long:

"Corn on the cop": A cop with an ear of corn on top of his head.

"Cotfish": A fish lying on a cot.

"They're so stupid . . ." said Holman.

Among the famous fixtures of the strip is the phrase "Notary Sojac."

It means, or so anyhow Holman solemnly insists, "Merry Christmas" in Gaelic.

One of Holman himself's favorite puns appeared two or three years ago in the strip:

"Rose's are red, Violet's are blue."

"Isn't that stupid . . ."

I'M GLAD IT'S MADE OUT OF STONE - I'D SURE HATE TO PUT IT OUT IF IT CAUGHT FIRE!

Post Paging Mr. Wilkins, Agent in 1895

Anybody remember a Washington Post circulation agent around 1895 named Mr. Wilkins who had one lung and used to get riled?

That seems to be one of the few hazy nuggets of memory which Sackett L. Duryee, 129 6th st. ne., can muster for his claim to be one of the four oldest Washington Post carrier boys.

The Post is hunting the four "boys" who delivered the paper longest ago as part of National Newspaper Boys Day this Saturday. On October 23, the quartet and several hundred of their current successors will entrain to Philadelphia for the Redskins-Eagle game as guests of The Post.

Writes Mr. Duryee: "I don't know about the longest time ago, but I did carry The Washington Post for several years around 1895. My memory plays tricks on me sometimes, but I believe the agent was a Mr. Wilkins. I am not sure. He told me he had only one lung and that I riled him occasionally. That impressed me.

Paid $7 a Month

"I was paid $7 per month for carrying the daily and Sunday editions. I served two routes at different times. One was 9th to 3d and Pennsylvania ave. to Indiana ave. nw. The other was G to Q and 9th to 6th sts. nw.

"That is my best recollection and may not be accurate. I do remember that I had to get up at 3:30 a. m. and walk from 10th and French sts. nw. to The Post building for the papers and then carry them to the route."

Now 69, Duryee is an administrative assistant with the Army Engineers. He's been in Government 50 years.

Stein Remembers Blizzard

Then there's Charles H. Stein of 511 Berwyn rd., Berwyn Heights, Md., whose memories of his delivery days revolve vividly around the big blizzard through which he had to lug his burden that winter.

But A. Y. Acher, 14 Montgomery ave., Takoma Park, Md., didn't have it bad at all. In 1905-06, it seems he had a friend, W. P. Horner and Acher, down to The that pulled a wagon, loaded with Horner and Acher, down to the Post building about 4 a. m. to get the papers, and then pulled the papers around their routes." Acher now is an accountant with the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

Entrants are asked to contact the Post circulation director, John J. Corson, by mail or phone, by Saturday.

Ingrid Bergman Offers Husband Half of Property

Rome, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—Ingrid Bergman is determined to go through with her plans for divorce, and already has offered to settle half her property on her husband if the rest can be placed in trust for their daughter, the star's personal representative said tonight.

Joseph Steele, spokesman for Miss Bergman, said her attorney is in Hollywood discussing the divorce arrangements with the lawyer representing her husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom. Miss Bergman and Lindstrom were married 12 years ago and have one child, a daughter, Pia.

Comic Artists Tickle D. C. Ribs 3d Day

Washington, which could stand a good shot of humor, rocked with laughter for the third day running yesterday as the Nation's leading cartoonists turned on a flood-tide of rib-shaking talent before school, hospital, radio, television and other audiences.

The cartoonist, including such top-flight practitioners of the ancient art as Milton Caniff of "Steve Canyon" and Ham Fisher of "Joe Palooka," were in town in support of the United States Savings Bonds program.

For a little space of time, at least, they were succeeding notably in getting the minds of the Capital's populace off such crises as the atom bomb and armed forces unification twisters and onto the doings of Smokey Stover, Terry and the Pirates, Steve Roper, Mickey Finn and their fabulous tribe.

Act as Ward 'Healers'

At Walter Reed and Mount Alto Hospitals, the cartonists traveled from ward to ward doing their sketches and "trick shots." Among the latter was one in which Bill Holman, creator of the wacky "Smokey Stover," drew a sketch of a steam engine and then asked the veterans if they would like to see a sketch of the engineers.

The veterans said they would—and Holman drew a big ear on each side of the engine.

A trick sketch of a flusomely-built Wac taking a bath in a steel helmet also earned some lusty laughs.

At Armstrong Today

Final school appearance will be at 1:05 p. m. today at Armstrong high school before the cartoonists leave town on "The Flying Cartoonist," which will take them back to their steady easels.

Then on October 13 they'll be on tour again, first in Boston, then in 16 other key cities where they'll do their big bit to encourage Americans to buy more bonds.

The traveling exhibit, "20,000 Years of Comics," tracing the history of comics from that far back and including modern-day samples, will be on display for the public again today at the Library of Congress.

The women's section of the D. C. Savings Bonds Division was entertained by the cartoonists last night at the exhibit. Earlier in the day the artists and continuty-writers were guests at a National Press Club luncheon.

Look and Laugh

There they did their sketching show before another audience that spent half its time looking and the other half laughing. Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder was a guest. John C. O'Brien, press club president, presided, and Rube Goldberg, editorial cartoonist and famed for his all-problems-solved inventions, emceed.

Captains of the school patrol will watch the cartoonists sketch at 9:30 a.m. today at the Washington Gas Light Auditorium. Milton Q. Ford, WWDC disc jockey and his parrot "Richard," will handle the pleasant master-of-ceremonies chores.

Foes Ask Voice On Gas Light Rate Incease

A group opposing an increase in rates for the Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday asked the District Public Utilities Commission for opportunity to discuss the company's proposed rate schedule.

The firm presented a schedule indicating how increased rates would be apportioned among various users at the hearing that ended September 27. Resumption is scheduled for October 10 at 10 a. m. in the District Building.

William A. Roberts, attorney for George C. Webster, trustee of the Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers, told the PUC the rates proposed were "unjust, unreasonable and discriminatory" in that they favored one class of consumer at the expense of another.

He said there were not sufficient facts before the commission on how the proposed rates were computed and that the rates might seriously affect the demands of the future.

Loan Firms Ask Changes In New Rules

Representatives of the Washington Association of Finance Companies met briefly yesterday with Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray to ask for changes in the recently-approved small-loan regulations. Gray said he would not recommend them.

The loan firms were furnished with applications for new licenses and forms for evidence of bonding on Friday, but thus far have not executed them, according to William R. Lichtenberg, attorney for the association.

The group's executive board plans a meeting this afternoon to discuss whether to test the regulations in court, Lichtenberg said.

Condemnation proceedings were sidered by the Commissioners e before several years ago, but resulting protest put an end the plan.

s part of the project, the Com- sioners yesterday asked the k and Planning Commission to rove transfer of a small tract the east side of Reservoir rd. Whitehaven pkwy. from the Na- al Park Service to the District another held by the United tes Army Engineers on the west e at the intersection.

Fairfax Board Seeks School Bond Issue

The Fairfax County school board yesterday came as close as it felt it should to asking county voters to petition it for a referendum on a school building bond issue.

The board, which last week unofficially agreed that a bond issue offers the only solution to the problem of classroom shortages, yesterday officially expressed its "willingness to consider a petition from the taxpayers . . . for a bond issue for local school improvements when and if presented."

Board members indicated they will approve such a petition, if presented, and send it on to the circuit court for final action.

School Supt. W. T. Woodson was instructed to prepare an estimate of immediate classroom needs. A year ago, the board set the amount needed immediately at $7,500,000. Since then enrollments have increased by more than 1700, and a total of 16 new classrooms have been started.

The Fairfax County School Emergency Committee, which worked for a bond-issue referendum last year, already has indicated its willingness to get the necessary number of signatures—10 percent of the qualified voters in the county.

Barkley Escorts Lady To Rear Senate Seat

The Senate is meeting in the tiny old Supreme Court room of the Capitol while its regular quarters are being repaired. Most visitors are barred.

Mrs. Finks told reporters she was visiting in Washington and had dropped around to see Barkley, an old friend.

Robbery Squad Sergeant Sent Back to Beat

Detective Sergt. Ernest R. Amos, jr., 36, veteran robbery squad investigator, was "busted" to the rank of private and returned to uniform yesterday.

The demotion, effective today because Amos was off yesterday, was recommended by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, and was approved by the Commissioners.

The action followed a complaint by Alfred B. Vincent, 46, of 1721 1st st. nw., that he was beaten and kicked by Amos the night of September 29 in the robbery squad room at police headquarters. Both are Negroes.

The demotion of Amos, one of the first Negro motorcycle policemen in the department, was announced by Barrett's administrative assistant, Sergt. Lewis Peters. He said Amos will report for duty to the Seventh Precinct today. Peters added that the case is still being investigated and that Amos may still face trial board action.

Vincent was treated at Gallinger Hospital, put in the police lineup the next morning and released.

Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, said he had verified that Vincent's left eye was bruised and bloodshot and he had a small cut inside his mouth.

Bryant said Amos and Earl A. Douglas, a private detective, told him Vincent was arrested as the suspected "fingerman" in several safe jobs, was drunk and belligerent and refused to answer questions in the squad room, and fought with them when they attempted to return him to the cellblock. Both denied that their revolvers were drawn or that Vincent had been struck with a chair or kicked.

The Police Department announced that Probationary Detective Miller A. Dixon, 35, a Negro, who has been working on the robbery squad for 20 months, has been promoted to Amos' spot. Promoted from private to probationary detective to take Dixon's place was Plainclothesman Robert J. Reed of the robbery squad.

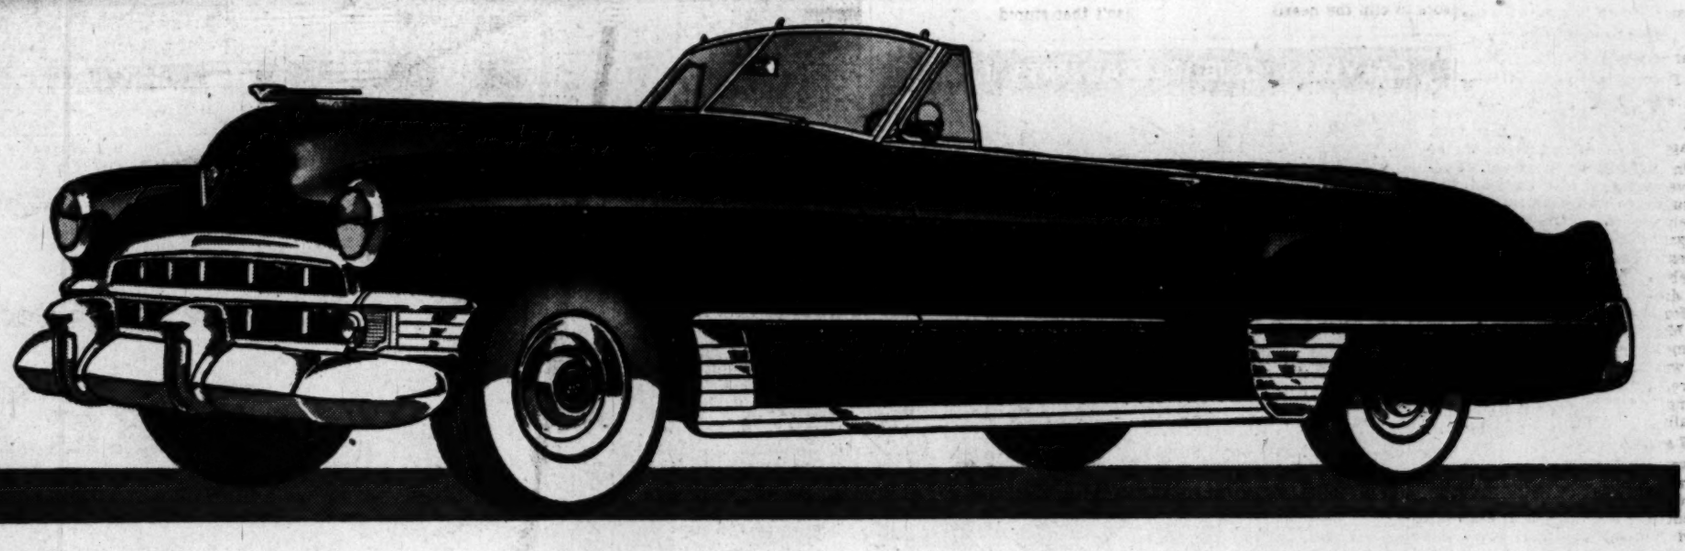
For the Enrichment of Life



RIGHT AT THIS MOMENT, there are thousands of people in America who are debating whether to end all compromise with motor cars—by taking the step up to Cadillac.

To all these people we should like to say: "Longfellow was right when he penned the words—'Time is fleeting.'"

If you want a Cadillac, and feel that you are entitled to one, you ought to make arrangements at once to have one delivered into your possession.

Each day you forego it, you will lose a goodly measure of happiness and satisfaction—for a Cadillac is a joy to possess, and a joy to utilize. Many say that it adds to the zest of their whole day's activities.

Certain it is that a Cadillac brings with it the utmost in performance, in comfort, and in safety—and that it contributes immeasurably to its owner's peace of mind. Few, indeed, can be happy without a Cadillac—once they have learned how greatly it enriches their lives.

If you are among the many who have the impulse to own a Cadillac, come in and see us soon. Each day you delay means a loss in satisfaction which no other material possession can hope to supply.

D. C. Gas Net Continues Dip In 8 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co., in the midst of a rate increase plea, reported yesterday that its earnings showed a continued decline in August and the first eight months this year.

The company's operations for August resulted in a net loss of $108,717, compared with a red-ink figure of $92,629 for the like 1948 month. For the first eight months net income of $934,127 declined $56,487 from the same 1948 period.

August operating revenues of $724,509 were $14,805 higher than last year, while operating expenses of $780,106 were $24,179 heavier. Nonoperating income and interest charges remained substantially the same.

Including Maryland and Virginia subsidiaries, the gas company reported consolidated net income of $1,029,288 for the first eight months, a decrease of $358,328 when contrasted with the like 1948 period.

Meters in service in the District of Columbia at the end of August totaled 172,971, an increase of 1727 for the past 12 months.

POPULAR PLAN: The Bond-a-Month plan in local banks now has 4108 participants who are investing $218,000 monthly or $2,600,000 a year in Savings Bonds, according to Chairman Thomas J. Groom of the D. C. Saving Bond Division. "This is an average investment of $53 a month issue price for each participant and an increase of 1544 persons, or 60 percent more than the 2564 recorded in 1948." Groom pointed out. The investment increase is $81,000 monthly, or nearly a million dollars annually, he added, explaining that virtually all purchases were of Series E bonds by professional men and women and others who do not have access to the Payroll Savings plan.

NEW METHODS: Brokers and security dealers must revise their marketing methods and drastically step up their advertising efforts, declared Louis Engel in an address yesterday before the Advertising Club of Washington in the Statler.

Engel

Engel, advertising manager of the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, said that brokers must "forget financial lingo and talk to Jones and Smith about stocks and bonds in language that they and their wives can understand. There's no reason why you can't advertise securities in the same way you advertise breakfast foods and automobiles."

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY: A dinner tonight at the Woodmont Country Club will honor the eightieth birthday of Rich's Shoe Store at 1001 F st. nw. Directors, and employes and members of their families will attend. Special tributes will be paid two employes who have retired during the past year—Milton Brock after 51 years and Walter O'Bannon after 49 years. Frank H. Rich, who is a grandson of one of the founders, is president of the firm.

ODD LOTS: In Chicago, a women's apparel shop favors milady with a 10 percent discount on her birthday and wedding anniversaries . . . A fish-filled version of the frankfurter is a new idea . . . Business failures in week ended October 1 climbed to 181 vs. 169 in previous week and 112 in same 1948 period . . . About 135 of Aetna Life Insurance Co.'s area representatives will meet here Monday at the Statler for a special conference on new and broadened coverages . . . Hudson Motor reported sales of 115,558 cars in first nine months this year, more than the total for all of 1948.

APPOINTMENT: Samuel W. Anderson, former director of the Industry division of the Economic Cooperation Administration, has been appointed a loan officer of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. He will evaluate applications from South America. Anderson at one time was a partner of Goldman, Sachs & Co., and an associate with Lehman Brothers. During the war, he served as program vice chairman of the War Production Board.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: G. J. Kerkstra, Washington district passenger agent for Rock Island Lines, has been elected vice president of the American Association of Traveling Passenger Agents . . . John L. Auh has resigned as vice president of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co. to become vice president of the Great Lakes Pipe Line Co. . . . Wilbur H. Norton, former president of Montgomery Ward & Co., has been elevated by General Motors Corp. to vice president in charge of policies and procedure in parts merchandising. Other newly elevated vice presidents for GM are Hugh Dean, to head the manufacturing staff, Carl F. Kindl in charge of Canadian and overseas operations, and Elis S. Hoglund who will continue as assistant general manager of overseas operations. GM now has 34 vice presidents.

EARNINGS: Royal Typewriter Co., Inc., reported net income of $3,692,650 or $3.19 a share for the fiscal year ended July 31, compared with $5,620,336 or $4.98 a share in the previous year. Other earnings statements:

Pity the Poor British Liberal!— He's Neither Tory Nor Planner

By J. A. Livingston

OXFORD, ENGLAND, Oct. 4.—Here within sight of the century-old stones of one of the world's greatest universities, where men learn the humanities and often practice them, you come stark up against the plight of the British liberal economist. He's 'twixt the the old-fashioned Tory and the new-fashioned planner and doesn't know where to go.

Livingston

As I listened to the liberal economist (who'd best be nameless) here and in London, I felt as if I was in a den of the National Association of Manufacturers during a bull session on President Roosevelt, the New Deal, and the CIO.

The English liberal is in this fix: His instinct is to preserve his identity and vote Liberal, but he fears that the Liberal Party hasn't a chance for a majority in the House of Commons. So he's inclined to trust to luck with the Conservatives, knowing full well the risk. He doesn't trust the Conservtives, who in years past went in for trade agreements and cartels, fixed prices, limited competition, and generally "conserved" things for themselves. He's equally unhappy over the Labor Government. Ordinarily, he'd be in sympathy with a program to raise the income level of the great majority of the people, to narrow disparities in income between the rich and the poor, and to expand the social service. But he insists that the Labor Government has gone too far too fast.

AS HE SEES IT, after the war the main job was to get production started, to recapture old markets, to rebuild war-battered and war-disorganized industry. Instead, the Labor Government tried to program Great Britain's future through socialization. The liberal argues that the owners and operators of the coal mines should have been encouraged to devote all their energies to expanding production, to installing new equipment, to working the best veins. No. They had to spend their time arguing with government experts over the price of nationalization, over fixing the terms of purchase. Ditto for the railways.

Government economists have a ready answer to that line of attack. They say that the liberals have fallen into a Conservative trap, that the stock answer to nationalization always is: "This is not the right time. Later would be better."

The liberal goes on to complain that by laying heavy taxes on industry to defray the cost of medical attention, the government has diverted funds which industry might otherwise use for much-needed industrial expansion and technological improvement. (Corporate taxes run to roughly 50 percent of profits.) Likewise, he argues that by setting aside materials, supplies, and labor for housing, the government again deprives industry of the economic wherewithal to rehabilitate. What Britain needs, he says, is higher productivity today for social benefits tomorrow.

ABOVE ALL, the liberal is suspicious of devaluation. He considers it the way by which the Labor Government will evade the responsibility of cutting down costs of production through (a) economies in the use of labor, (b) longer hours, (c) higher out per man, and even, perhaps, (d) unemployment. Prices will be permitted to rise, thereby cutting down the worker's income and consumption indirectly. So, inflation, not honesty, will lower the standard of living.

The London Economist, a liberal journal, tries to offer a liberal position between Toryism and planning: "There is no need to abandon purposive direction over economic developments but only to restrict the planning effort to the basic essentials. There is no need to abandon all economic controls, provided enough free play is left to bring about necessary adjustments. There is no need to abandon the welfare state but only to base it on realism. There is no need to abandon the objective of greater social equality, provided it doesn't deprive the economy of its mainspring of greater incentive. There is no need to abandon the doctrine of public ownership provided that the nationalized industries are turned into efficient economic instruments and are not regarded as social welfare institutions for their employes."

There is no need to go on . . . except to say that some of the less patient liberals declare: "If the United States would cease bailing our government out, if your country would cut off Marshall aid, all this nonesense would stop." But a liberal economist, if he had the responsibility of high office, hardly could make such an assertion and stay in office. That's why he has no place to go.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—Soybeans were independently strong at today's Board of Trade session, but grains couldn't find a firm footing for an advance.

Wheat tried for a time, on promise of Government flour buying, but scattered liquidation developed and the nearby delivery suffered the largest losses. One factor in the decline was the reduction of the Commodity Credit Corporation's buying price, off around a cent.

Corn made some progress on short covering, but sales by cash houses offset the upswing.

At the finish wheat was ¾ to 1¾ lower, corn was ⅛ higher to ½ lower, oats were unchanged to ⅛ lower, rye was ¼ to a cent lower, soybeans were ¾ to 1¼ higher and lard was unchanged to 13 cents a hundredweight lower.

'Greatest? Not Me, Shoeless Joe,' Says Cobb

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, OCT. 4.—Here for the World Series is a gentleman who used to be a ball player himself, name of Tyrus Raymond Cobb. Mr. Cobb, who led the American League in hitting for nine straight years before an interloper named Tris Speaker moved in, was talking baseball today, and I quote:

POVICH

"I've been reading for years that I was the greatest natural hitter the game ever knew. To me, that was always funny reading, because I never was a natural hitter.

"Now Joe Jackson, there was a natural hitter. Babe Ruth copied Jackson, who'd stand up there and swing his hands way down on the bat, not like me. I always had to choke my grip and do a lot of things around that plate, because hitting didn't come as easy to me as it came to Jackson, even if I got better results.

"Jackson didn't care who was pitching. It didn't make any difference to him. I got a lot of hits because I knew who was pitching, and how they figured to pitch me.

"NOW TAKE WALTER Johnson. I guess I hit Walter Johnson as well as anybody did, but not because it was easy for me. I used to crib a few inches at the plate and stand with my toes virtually on it. Johnson was such a timid guy that I knew he was afraid he'd kill somebody with his fast ball, and he'd keep that ball outside, away from me.

"That wasn't the one I'd try to hit. After Johnson got in a hole, he'd ease up a little bit, and that's the pitch I laid for. Never did try to get more than a single off Johnson. You couldn't afford to take a full swing.

"The day Johnson broke in we knew he was a great one. We had to beat him on bunts. I asked the Detroit club to buy him after the first time we saw him, but they wouldn't go for $25,000 for a rookie pitcher.

"Later on, our guys had so much respect for Johnson that they used to beg off playing, and say they were sick, if it came up a cloudy day with Walter pitching. Anybody who ever said they liked to hit against Johnson, lied. You went up there because it was a duty.

"IF THERE WAS a better pitcher than Johnson, I guess it was big Ed Walsh of the White Sox in 1908, the year he won 40. Walsh was the only spit-baller who didn't pitch his arm away. But over the long haul, you'd have to take Johnson.

"Catchers? Well, I don't know who I liked best. Bill Dickey and Mickey Cochrane were great ones, but I like to talk about the players I played against. I guess you'd have to say Ray Schalk was tops. When you're up there hitting, you knew that that Schalk was always doing something to try to beat you.

"If I wasn't a natural hitter, I can claim one honor. I was a natural base stealer. You don't steal bases just against the pitcher and catcher. I stole 'em against the man who was covering second, too. I used to watch his eyes. They would tell you more about what kind of a throw it was and where the ball was going, than anything el about him.

"Then you judged your slide in or outside the bag, cordingly. You watched his eyes, because they were t only honest part of him when a throw was coming.

"THE SECOND DAY I played in the majors I change my whole style of sliding. In the minors, I was a head-fir guy. I tried it against Kid Elberfield of the old Yankee and he showed me that his knee was harder than my hea

"They say I was out to get all the infielders. I wasn out for them any more than they were out for me. I on tried to spike two men deliberately in my life. One of the was Dutch Leonard, the old pitcher. I had my reasons, to I got him on a bunt that I laid down, but I had to go a the way into first base coaching box to do it.

"The Philadelphia papers had the whole town yelling fo my scalp back around 1908. After one spiking I got 1 threatening letters the next time in there. I was scare enough before I left the hotel to leave a letter in my ma box. In it was my will, just in case."

College Player of Week

Billy Hayes

Of North Carolina U.

FOR THE PAST three years, reporters covering the North Carolina football team have become so stylized that they've come to regard any story about the Tar Heels which doesn't mention Charlie Justice first and foremost as a sin.

Most of the time, the great Choo-Choo deserved all the accolades—that is until this past Saturday when the Tar Heels continued unbeaten by squeezing out a 21-14 victory over Georgia.

Justice contributed one touchdown on a run and passed for another, but the real star of the game was Billy Hayes, an Arlington, Va., lad whom The Washington Post selects as its area player of the week.

A standout football player at Washington-Lee High and a crackerjack fullback at Carolina, the 185-pound junior simply couldn't break into the Tar Heel backfield until this year because of the presence of Walt Pupa and later Hosea Rodgers.

Saturday, against Georgia, however, Hayes came into his own. Georgia had just tied the count at 14-14 and the 7-point favored Tar Heels had only 90 seconds left to do something about it. Hayes, who completed an 18-yard pass to End Art Weiner to set up the first NC score, took a short screen pass from Justice and trucked 24 yards to the Georgia 32.

On the next play, Hayes moved over to Justice's tailback spot while Choo-Choo went out on the flank. With the Georgia defense pegged to halt an expected Hayes-to-Justice pass, Hayes nonchalantly stepped back and fired an 18-yard strike to Weiner, who legged it the rest of the way for the winning touchdown.

"All that boy needed was confidence," Coach Carl Snavely remarked after the game. "He's always been a good football player and now we're counting on him to be a great one."

MORRIS SIEGEL.

Reynolds vs. Newcombe Or Roe in Series Opener

never won the title, and were plastered with 17 defeats in the 27 games they played.

Their latest failure was two years ago when they carried the Yankees to seven games. But the Bums vision the heavy artillery on on their side starting tomorrow. Over the year they outhit the Yankees .270 to .264, and blasted 153 home runs compared to the Yanks' 115.

For the first time since Yankee teams began appearing in World Series with regularity, the New York American League club does not carry the best home run record of the contenders into the classic.

In starting Reynolds, a renowned nonfinisher who has completed only four of the starts he made this season, Stengel has the comfort of Joe Page in the bullpen. Page, who worked 60 games for the Yanks in relief this season, 43 of which they won, has made his living mostly at relieving Reynolds.

Scorning the odds in favor of the Yankees, Brooklyn is solidly with the Dodgers who, like the Yanks came from behind in the last week, to win the pennant, and concedes nothing in any phase of play.

In contrast to Joe DiMaggio, only .300 hitter in the Yankee lineup, the Dodgers will back their pitching with National League Batting Champion Jackie Robinson (.342) and Carl Furillo, .322-hitting right fielder.

Later he said: "I'm pretty sure I can't make it."

The Dodgers are offering in Outfielder Duke Snider, First Baseman Gil Hodges and Catcher Roy Campanelli a trio that has hit more than 20 home runs each, compared to the Yankees' lone member of that circle, Tommy Henrich.

Stengel's complete lineup was awaiting the choice of the Brooklyn pitcher. If it is the right-handed Newcombe, the Yankee manager will wheel in Bobby Brown as his third baseman, Gene Woodling as his left fielder and Cliff Mapes as his right fielder. Against the left-handed pitching of Roe he will start Bill Johnson at third base, Johnny Lindell and Hank Bauer in outfield posts.

Joe DiMaggio, back in the Yankee lineup after a siege of virus that threatened to keep him out of the last week of the season, was at Yankee Stadium today—rarin'. The two days' rest had been heaven-sent, he said.

"I feel like I'm up to this series," said DiMaggio. "No complaints, and I know I'm stronger then when we battled the Red Sox last week." It was music to the ears of Stengel and his Yankee teammates, who freely confess to the lift that DiMaggio's presence provides.

Stengel knowingly was sacrificing defensive strength behind the bat in starting Yogi Berra, but was gambling on the potency of Berra's bat to offset any marauding of the Bums on the bases.

Berra again will be encountering Jackie Robinson, the National League's leading base stealer, whose antics in the 1947 World Series hounded Berra out of the Yankee lineup.

Can't Play—Furillo; He'll Play—Shotton

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Carl Furillo, powerful Brooklyn Dodger right-fielder, said today that he believes a painful groin injury will prevent him from playing against the New York Yankees in the World Series, opening tomorrow, "unless the doctor performs a miracle."

Manager Burt Shotton, however, said Furillo would play.

Nats May Name New Pilot Before Series Winds Up

New York, Oct. 4.—It won't take the Washington Nats long to name a successor to Joe Kuhel as manager of the club for the 1950 American League season.

Club officials, here for the World Series, said today they expect to announce the new manager before the scrap between the Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers is over.

There was little speculation as to whom the Nats' choice might be, but the name of Buckey Harris, former Washington manager, was mentioned by persons not connected with the club. Harris managed San Diego of the Pacific Coast League this year.

Tatum's Contest Picks Include Tie for Terps

MARYLAND'S COACH Jim Tatum goes out on a couple of limbs this week.

As if it weren't bad enough that he has to take his boys out to East Lansing to meet mighty Michigan State, The Washington Post puts the arm on him to pick this Saturday's winners in the weekly Football Contest.

Tatum responded nobly, selecting his Terrapins to tie the highly-touted Spartans. He also likes Army over Michigan. Last week, Georgetown's Bob Margarita picked 14 of the 21 winners.

Here are Tatum's predictions: Wake Forest over Georgetown; Kansas over George Washington; Maryland-Michigan State tie; Virginia over Virginia Tech; Army over Michigan; Duke over Navy; Cornell over Harvard; Penn over Princeton; Yale over Columbia; Holy Cross over Dartmouth; William and Mary over VMI; Kentucky over Georgia; Mississippi over Vanderbilt; Southern California over Ohio State; Notre Dame over Purdue; North Carolina over South Caroline; Iowa State over Colorado; Missouri over Oklahoma A. & M.; Stanford over UCLA. Oklahoma, 21; Texas, 14.

It's All Free at Griffith Stadium

'Skins Break Long-Time Prdctice Secrecy With Colorful Public Clinic Next Wednesday

AFTER 12 YEARS of making game preparations in comparative secrecy, the Washington Redskins invite the public to watch their workout at Griffith Stadium next Wednesday night, October 12.

It's the first half of the Redskin Football Clinics, sponsored by The Washington Post. A second session will be held October 19.

All the trappings of bigtime professional football will surround the occasion, the first opportunity for Washington's grid students to get a formal and authentic education as a National Football League team polishes its plays for important action.

Fans will listen as well as look. The Griffith Stadium public address system will be manned by Harry Wismer, nationally famous collegiate and professional announcer who handles the weekly Redskin broadcasts.

WISMER, with a microphone on the field, will explain each aspect of the Redskin drill as it takes place. There'll be no questions as to "What are they trying to do now?" because the staccato-voiced Wismer will keep abreast of each bit of action.

And while the Redskins are working on fundamentals, Wismer will call various star players to the mike to answer questions that may have puzzled observers for a long time. How does Sammy Baugh pass with such uncanny accuracy? How does big John Adams avoid a tackle trap play? How does Fullback Ed Quirk know when to put down his head and make like a pile-driver?

The nice thing about the whole program is that it will be free. Doesn't cost you a sou. All you have to do is clip out the box elsewhere on The Washington Post sports pages and follow instructions.

THE GALA OCCASION will open at 7 p. m. with the playing of collegiate football records over the loudspeaker. Then the Redskin band, more than 100-strong, will parade

At 7:45 the complete Redskin squad will take the field and after brief calesthenics go through dummy blocking and tackling drills, run through plays and then undergo a short scrimmage. Throughout the affair Wismer will be giving helpful information on what is going on.

Finally, at 8:30 the show will be wound up with an attraction which has been used by the Chicago Bears as their main halftime entertainment. Kid football teams from the Police Boys Club and the Boys Club of Washington will stage a pair of 12-minute contests.

Notre Dame-Washington Scoff Rift Report

Storm Over Officiating Subsides

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—The storm blown by four whistle-tooters in the Notre Dame-Washington football game Saturday faded to a gentle breeze today.

Notre Dame, which won the game at Seattle, 27-7, but hollered at the officiating, said there was nothing personal as far as the University of Washington was concerned.

Washington, in turn, also scoffed the idea that the episode meant the two schools would never tussle on the grid any more.

At a Chicago football writers' meeting, Irish Athletic Director Edward (Moose) Krause explained that:

1. Notre Dame Coach Frank Leahy acted "merely as a coach defending against dirty football inference" when he blasted officiating which inflicted 135 yards in penalties on the Irish.

2. Right after the game, he (Krause) discussed possible future games with Athletic Director Harvey Cassill of Washington. (Saturday's tilt ended a two-year series between Notre Dame and Washington.)

3. Movies of Saturday's game showed that instances of Notre Dame holding as interpreted by the officials were wrongly called.

Tipplers' Tip

Sip-and-See Fans Can Do So at Bars

Washington's tavern keepers last night were taking a kindlier view than their New York brethren of the television fans who will crowd their establishments for the first game of the World Series today.

A check of numerous drinking places indicated no special cover or minimum charge is planned against the influx of video and V. O. imbibers in Washington.

The Friendly Tavern policy will be to "try and sell 'em something" but no measures will be taken to see that customers don't "just sit." At Garvin's Grill the feeling is that "nothing much can be done about it if the customers don't buy anything."

Tommy Whelan's place, with a new 300-inch screen, is expecting a large crowd but doesn't expect it to help business much. And at Bassin's, which caters to The Washington Post employes, the pretty sentiment is that "our television set is solely for the enjoyment of our customers, who are also our friends."

In New York, however, United Press reported a sterner group of tavern keepers. At the St. Mark's saloon of Sam Atkins, promoter of the nickel beer, the boss slapped on a one dollar "minimum" for watching the series. And at Sam's place, on Third Avenue, no special charge is planned but the owner's policy is definite.

"If anyone doesn't want to drink in here," Sam said, "we'll put him out—but courteously, of course."—BILL BURNETT.

Spartans to See Red

'Crimson Shirts for Terps; They'll Look Bigger'—Tatum

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Pigskin professor James Moore Tatum turned psychologist yesterday.

He suited up his Maryland football squad in bright, crimson jersies for Saturday's clash with Michigan State in East Lansing.

"Makes 'em look bigger and maybe Michigan State will have a little more respect for us," he explained.

When someone suggested that the red jerseys would also serve as a shield for the blood-letting that the Terps scouts envision when the huge Spartans wade into the Marylanders, Tatum grimaced:

"Don't mention that word Spartans to me," he grieved. "Their football team is powerful enough when you call them Michigan State. But when you refer to them as Spartans, that sounds almost as bad as superman."

Down deep inside, Tatum and his staff feel the Terps have a thin—thin as possible, mind you—chance of holding State.

They said "holding State," mind you, not beating them. And if the Terrapins do hold them to a respectable score, it'll be quite an accomplishment. With subs playing most of the second half, Coach Biggie Munn's Spartans—there's that word again—rolled for the unbelievable total of 764 yards against Marquette last Saturday.

Marquette, of course, isn't one of the Nation's better teams, but any team that gains 764 yards against any other team is bound to have something on the ball.

The Maryland varsity got its first look at the Michigan State offense as run off by the Terp frosh yesterday and the result was far from satisfactory. The big Maryland linemen were being sucked in and trapped all afternoon by the raw Terp recruits simulating the Spartan attack.

The squad realizes what a tremendous task it faces Saturday beginning at 2 p. m. Michigan State, which lost to mighty Michigan only by 7-3, has been built up as something of a colossus to them, but the Terrapins didn't appear to be overawed.

Mighty Mo Modzelewski, who ran amok on two plays against Georgetown Friday night from right halfback, has been definitely installed as a right halfback. Heretofore, the publicized sophomore has been alternating between left halfback, fullback and right halfback. In addition, he's been playing defensive center also, a role he'll fill Saturday again.

Minus Pool Results as Alexis Quits

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 4.—Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Lanlast, a durable old gelding, turned in his first 1949 victory here today. The 8-year-old, which won six of 18 starts last year, earning $17,450, forged to the finish line a half length in front of D. A. Rosenbaum's Reborn. The latter was three parts of a length in advance of Tacaro Briar, owned by Tacaro Briar.

Lanlast's triumph, coming at long last, was aided and abetted by the High Ground Stable's Alexis, coupled in the betting with Tacaro Briar. Alexis, who appearance made the entry a 1-to-2 shot, walked out of the gate when the start came, thus being eliminated.

The 7-year-old former handicap ace was breaking from the No. 1 stall and it was recalled he acted similarly last year at Pimlico when in the same position.

Luckily for the show bettors on the entry, but unluckily for the track, Tacaro Briar saved more than $11,000 bet on the J. B. Bond-trained pair for third money. The race brought a minus show pool that cost the Maryland Jockey Club $1468.80 the amount necessary to produce $2.20 show mutuels, minimum allowed by the State.

Lanlast, who had accounted for only $175 in earning before today, took $1950 and supplied an $8.80 mutuel. Jockey Jack Robertson, riding his fourth winner in two days, sent the son of Catalan the six furlongs in 1.13 2/5, fastest three quarters time of the day.

Three-year-old fillies competed in the second best offering. King Ranch's Bebita proved a worthy favorite, scampering home at $3.60 while in charge of Jockey Robert J. Martin. C. E. Nelson's Riskabule gave a game battle to finish second with Walson Elliott's Queen Chatter third.

The winner was clocked in 1:14 1/5.

The daily double paid $40.40 and the successful bettors were those with the 6-and-4 tickets. H. G. Bedwell's French Lure won the first at $9.40, under Jockey Willie Downs' riding, while Mrs. H. S. Mitchell's First Salvo, paying $7.40, ridden by Jockey Bobby Mitchell, won the second.

Whelchel's Prediction Fulfilled

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

While Redskin admirers, heartened by their team's 27-14 triumph over the Pittsburgh Steelers, were gloating yesterday over the latest performance of the incomparable Slingin' Sammy Baugh, many were asking one question:

"What's happened to Harry Gilmer?"

The answer is simple. Nothing.

The Alabama great who was built up as Baugh's successor, it may suddenly dawn on various observers, is now the victim of that build-up.

Although he looked good in several preseason games, Gilmer has appeared to flop in both the Redskins' National Football League games so far. The kid who was touted as every bit as good as Baugh—plus—has completed exactly one pass in nine tries. He handled the Redskins in seven series of plays in two games, and went nowhere.

Shrewd Observation

Coach Billick Whelchel now must be credited with a shrewd observation when, on the day he signed a coaching contract, he warned the press about expecting too much from Gilmer.

"You who have seen him play," Whelchel said in effect, "think he's a terrific player. He is—as a collegian. But he's got an awful lot to learn before he's a good professional." This from a man who'd never coached a professional team before.

Just don't give up on Gilmer. The Redskins and Whelchel haven't.

The Redskins celebrated their return to Washington yesterday with, of all things, a workout . . . Facing the club is its first home start Sunday against the New York Giants at Griffith Stadium . . . And the Giants will have three more days of practice than the 'Skins, having played last weekend's game on Friday . . . Every Redskin had at least one painful bruise after Monday's rough engagement with the Steelers and several players didn't work out at all . . . Guard John Steber had a fractured cheek, End Joe Tereshinski was still in Pittsburgh with a head concussion and End Hal Crisler nursed a shoulder separation.

Dunbar Edges Parker-Gray

Dunbar withstood two last period touchdowns by Parker-Gray's Alvin Carroll to take a 13-12 victory yesterday at Dunbar. Buddy Tapscott scored both touchdowns for the winners and the decisive conversion was booted by Lee Washington.

Payne Golf Starts Today

By West McLean
Post Reporter

The oft-postponed and shifted Payne trophy competition for women conducted by the Maryland State Golf Association finally gets under way today. The 54-hole tournament will be held at Baltimore's Rolling Road Golf Club, with 18 holes each day for three days.

The major medal-play tournament for women in this area is limited to golfers with handicaps from 1 through 15, with prizes awarded on a gross and net basis.

Mrs. Walter Stokes, Manor Country Club, is the defending champion in this, the last MSGA event for women this season.

The women follow up this one with the Middle Atlantic championship at the Country Club of Maryland October 10.

The two-woman team championship will be played as part of the qualifying round, according to an announcement by the chairmanship of Mrs. Eloise Sleuterberg and Marvin Thompson.

Tackle Sanchez Traded by 'Skins

To make room for Clyde Goodnight, former Tulsa end who was released by the Green Bay Packers and ignored by the rest of the National Football League, the Washington Redskins yesterday asked waivers on Tackle John Sanchez, a dependable performer with the D. C. eleven since he was obtained fro mthe Detroit Lions two years ago.

Goodnight, who will start workouts with the 'Skins today, is the seventh end on the squad of 32. Sanchez departure leaves the team with five tackles.

Conferees to Meet President Today on Executive Pay Bill

The 10 Senate-House conferees on the executive pay bill will meet with the President at 10 a. m. today at his invitation.

"The President wants to be certain that we understand his position in this matter," a conferee explained, "and he has invited all of us to meet with him personally to avoid any misunderstanding."

If he gets the opportunity, one conferee said, he'll ask the President to express his views on the different Senate-House postal and classified pay-reclassification bills.

"Frankly," he began, "I want to know what sort of bills the President will sign. I have heard rumors that the President would veto the House postal bill because of its heavy cost if it's sent to him. I'd like to know if there's any truth to it so we can hold our conferences accordingly. I've also been told that the Administration has serious objections to the Senate's classified bill and I'd like to know what they are."

It's believed, however, that the President's primary concern is a good executive pay bill. Unquestionably, Mr. Truman will indorse the House executive bill which is a bit more liberal than the Senate's bill. In addition he can be expected to urge that the classified pay ceiling be lifted from $10,330 to $15,000 as proposed in the House bill. The Senate bill would raise it to $12,500.

The President, it's reported, will get support for his views from several Senators who signed the watered-down compromise executive pay bill. These Senators indorsed the measure without studying it and they found out later that it didn't meet their objections.

Several additional top-flight Government executives have threatened to quit unless a reasonable executive bill is approved. The President has urged them to stay on. That's why he wants a good executive bill.

At REA, it's reported that Administrator Claude Wickard may resign to run for the Senate next year from Indiana. Alex Campbell, of Justice's Criminal Division, plans to quit on January 1 to enter the Indiana race. Both have their eyes on the seat now held by Senator Capehart, a Republican . . . At Agriculture, Ralph A. Sheals is the new assistant chief of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine in charge of administration. He succeeds Edmund Stephens who transferred to a similar position in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Engineering . . . At the Bureau of Standards, Dr. Louis Bryant Tuckerman has retired after 30 years of service. The inventor of the optical strain gage and known the world over for his lightweight aircraft structures, he was commended for his outstanding scientific achievements in a letter from the President. Benjamin L. Sander has been appointed to the bureau's ordnance research laboratory staff . . . Representative Case (R., S. D.) yesterday put in a bill to require all Government autos, except those used by investigators, to be identified. He believes his plan would discourage personal use of the vehicles.

PAY BILL: None of the pay bills would be effective as of some past date, as has been rumored. All of them would be effective on the first full pay period after their enactment. That means, of course, the effective date would be different for different agencies because of the staggered pay system.

SOCIAL SECURITY: For the first time in history, it appears that the House will vote to put a big bloc of Federal workers under the Social Security system.

The Doughton bill, now being debated by the House, would extend the old-age and survivors' feature of the Social Security system to about 100,000 Government employes who are not now covered by any other Government retirement system.

Board Unit Backs Plan For Training

Full Body to Act Today on System To Qualify Them For Raises in Pay

An in-service training program for District school teachers to qualify them for pay raises at five-year intervals was approved yesterday by the personnel committee of the Board of Education.

The plan will come before the full board today at its meeting at 3:30 p. m. at the Franklin Administration Building, 13th and K sts. nw. If approved it will be put into immediate operation.

The 1947 Teachers' Salary Act required the board to set up a training program "to promote continuous professional growth among the teachers."

Must Increase Attainments

The act said teachers and school officers must show increased professional attainments at 5 and 10 years after beginning teaching to receive pay raises. Within the five-year periods, annual increases are automatic.

In submitting the plan, Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said it had been delayed two years because of a shortage of funds. Ten thousand dollars is alloted in the present budget for bringing out-of-town educational experts to the District to conduct the program.

The committee approved scheduling of six lecturers in the fields of general education, child growth and development, reading, nutrition and food service, and in accounting and management of cafeterias.

Dr. Kottmeyer Scheduled

Scheduled to lecture first on reading is Dr. William Kottmeyer, assistant superintendent of schools at St. Louis. He will lecture November 2 and 3 and the committee approved half-day school sessions on these days.

To meet requirements of law, the committee also approved the organized educational activities now provided by the school system at Wilson and Miner Teacher Colleges.

The committee said that to qualify for the raises teachers must have an average rating of "reasonable quality of service" or better for the five-year period and must participate in at least one major activity of the official in-service program for each year of the five years.

As a substitute for the second requirement the committee recognized college work and service on city-wide educational committees.

The figure represents 3402 more children than were attending schools here a year ago.

Most of the increase is in the elementary grades, both white and Negro. Of the total, white students now number 48,639, Negroes 45,629. A breakdown shows:

Elementary grades, 29,015 white, 29,378 Negro; junior high schools, 9486 white, 9564 Negro; vocational high schools, 1030 white, 954 Negro; senior high schools, including veterans centers and the Capitol Page School, 8547 white, 5202 Negro; teacher colleges, 561 white, 531 Negro.

AAA Typist Killed on 'Cycle; Area Boy Dies Under Truck

Garbage Collector Runs Over Child In Driveway

A garbage truck backed into the court behind 20-month-old Daniel Brown's home in Greenbelt, Md., yesterday.

When it drove out, the right rear wheel of the truck passed over the child's head and killed him instantly.

Daniel was the son of Dock F. and Martha Eileen Brown of 15-R Laurel Hill rd. The father is employed as a mechanic in a Hyattsville garage.

The only apparent witness to the accident was the dead boy's 3-year-old brother, Gregory. The older boy ran screaming into the house for his mother. She came out, saw Daniel's body and became hysterical.

According to Greenbelt Chief of Police George Panagoulis, the truck was driven by Maurice Hager, 43, of 3d st. and Chestnut ave., Lanham, Md.

Panagoulis said Hager and Paul Friend of Beltsville, helper on the truck, told him this story:

The truck had backed into the court, made the garbage collections and was starting to drive out. Friend felt a bump and shouted to Hager who stopped within a few feet. Then they saw the child's limp body lying behind the truck.

The child was pronounced dead by Dr. John T. Malone, Prince Georges County medical examiner, and the body was removed to Chambers' funeral home in Riverdale.

Hager was released in $1000 bond on a technical charge of manslaughter and ordered to appear at a hearing Thursday in Hyattsville police court.

The Brown family has lived in Greenbelt for three years and Gregory is their only other child.

This was the first traffic fatality in Greenbelt since 1939 and the third since the Government-built town was opened 12 years ago.

Motorcycle Spilled On Hitting Safety Island Near Fredericksburg

A Washington woman died Monday in a Fredericksburg, Va., hospital of injuries received in a motorcycle accident near there

She was Mrs. Mary Adelaide Bedford, 20, of 5926 13th pl. nw. Her companion, John T. White, jr., of 3500 Highwood dr. se., was said to have sustained a broken collar bone

The accident occurred about 1 a. m. Sunday when the motorcycle operated by White struck a safety island on Route 1 near Fredericksburg, skidded and overturned.

Members of Mrs. Bedford's family said she and White were on their way to Richmond to watch motorcycle races

White is slated to appear at a Spotsylvania County Trial Justice Court hearing October 21 on a reckless driving charge.

MRS. MARY BEDFORD
Pretty cyclist dies

A native of Washington, Mrs. Bedford attended public schools here. She was employed by the American Automobile Association as a secretary.

She and her husband, Walter Bedford, of New Orleans, were estranged. They have one child, John, 2, who has been hospitalized here since birth with a gland disease.

Mrs. Bedford is also survived by her mother, Mrs. Carline Ratrie, a teacher at Capitol Heights, Md. elementary school, and two sisters, Mrs. Alice Ann Luly and Miss Myrna Ratrie, all of the 13th pl. address.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today from Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

In a motorcycle accident in the District yesterday, Paul Testerman, 16, of Rockville, was treated at Sibley Hospital for a possible fracture of the right arm, severe scalp lacerations and a possible skull fracture. His condition was listed as serious.

Police said the motorcycle operated by Testerman collided at North Capitol and H sts. nw. with a car driven by Theodore J. Kulesza, 27, of New Britain, Conn. Kulesza was not injured.

Death of Man Who Ran For Car Ruled Accident

A coroner's jury yesterday ruled as accidental the death of Francis F. Proctor, 73, of 3 New York ave. nw., who was fatally injured when struck by a trolley car last Tuesday.

The accident occurred on Pennsylvania ave. near Jackson pl. nw. Witnesses told police Proctor was not in the crosswalk and was running against the red light trying to catch an eastbound trolley when he was hit by the westbound conveyance operated by Michael C. Embry, jr., 24, Cheverly, Md.

Suit Charges Negro School Is Inferior

A District Court suit filed yesterday asks that injunctions be granted to prevent the allotment of inferior facilities to Negro students at Cardozo High School.

The suit was brought on behalf of four students there claiming violation of Constitutional rights and damages totaling $350,000.

Defendants are the members of the Board of Education here and Hobart M. Corning, Superintendent of Schools. The suit was brought by James L. Haley of 2107 H st. ne., Mrs. Theresa Edmonds, 1905 Savannah pl. se.; Mrs. Lillie Boyd, 829 13th st. ne., and Archie W. Graves, 1885 Savannah pl. se. All the plaintiffs have children at Cardozo.

The suit declares that Cardozo is inferior to school facilities alloted white students in that it uses a "triple shift," uses corridors for classes, and has an inadequate auditorium, cafeteria, gymnasium, library, lighting and shower facilities, overcrowded classes and is a fire and health hazard.

At the same time, the suit states, the education authorities refuse to turn over to the Negroes surplus white schools, such as Central High School.

The action accuses the defendants of "race prejudice" and of an "alleged fear of the reaction of the adult white population of the District of Columbia."

The college accreditation of Cardozo is threatened by conditions at the school, the suit says.

Members of the school board were named defendants in another suit filed Monday which also raised the question of equality of educational facilities.

Suit Filed for 4-Year-Old

The suit filed in behalf of a 4-year-old Negro boy who had been denied admission to the Richardson Elementary School kindergarten because of overcrowding. In the 1951 budget requests school officials said there are 2500 Negro children of kindergarten age not in school because of lack of facilities.

Last year white elementary schools in the overcrowded southeast sections of the city had waiting lists of kindergarten age children. This year they have been absorbed by placing children in the lower elementary grades on part-time.

Court Denies 7 Gambling Dismissals

Defendants Seized In Fay's Mass Raids Argue Arrests Were Made Illegally

Judge Edward A. Tamm refused to quash indictments against seven men in District Court yesterday as the curtain was raised again on the Government's long-drawn gambling drama.

He also denied motions that evidence seized at the time the men were arrested be suppressed. He did, however, grant motions that the Government furnish each of the seven with a bill of particulars stating when and where the offenses were alleged to have occurred.

The seven were among 36 men indicted following U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay's simultaneous mass gambling raids last March. Two of the men have since died and motions by counsel for all other defendants were decided before District Court took its summer recess.

Seven Identified

The seven men whose motions were ruled on yesterday were:

Harry S. Kopel, copartner in Hammel's Restaurant, 416 10th st. nw., charged with two counts of maintaining a place for the purpose of gambling; Walter C. Plummer, 37, 6228 N. Dakota ave. nw., a waiter in Hammel's, charged with setting up a gaming table; Philip Samakov, alias Phil Harris, 50, 1360 Peabody st. nw., charged with setting up a gaming table and promoting a numbers lottery; Attilio Acalotti, alias Till Alcott, 40, 908 14th st. nw., a Times-Herald circulation man, charged with promoting a numbers lottery; William "Snags" Lewis, described by Fay as "a big-shot gambler," 4335 Blagden ave. nw., charged with promoting a numbers lottery; Frank Billeci, 41, 509 Margaret dr., Silver Spring, also a Times-Herald circulation man, charged with promoting a lottery and Umberto "Chi-Chi" D'Ambrosio, 1227 New York ave., charged with setting up a gaming table.

Judge Tamm also denied a motion to try Lewis separately in the case in which he is charged with Acolotti and Billeci.

Call Arrests Illegal

Attorneys for the seven argued that the indictments should be dismissed because the arrest and search warrants were illegal, and that evidence seized at the time of their clients' arrest should be suppressed because it was seized illegally.

In denying the motion to dismiss the indictment against one of the seven, Plummer, Judge Tamm remarked that the motion submitted by T. Emmett McKenzie, Plummer's attorney, "may have had literary merit," but had "no legal merit."

McKenzie's motion was couched in Irish wit instead of the usual legal language.

Man Fined, Given Term For Drunken Driving

A 31-year-old Arlington man was fined $100 and given 30 days in jail yesterday by Arlington County Court Judge Hugh Reid on a charge of driving while drunk.

He is Kenneth C. Shannon, 6450 Tuscarawas rd., Arlington, who pleaded guilty to the charge. Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown said Shannon had failed to appear under $1500 bond September 26 when the case was first called.

Ruhland to Direct District Division of Cancer Society

Dr. George C. Ruhland, who retired Friday as District Health Officer, has accepted the position of executive director of the D. C. Division, American Cancer Society.

The announcement was made by Dr. Ruhland, himself, in a press conference called to announce new division grants totalling $90,056.36 to support local activities in the fight against cancer.

Dr. Ruhland said yesterday that when he accepted the position he did so with the thought it would be "good mental hygiene" to taper off from the activities of 40 years in public health work. His new job, however, may keep him more active than he initially thought, he added with a smile.

As executive director, he said, he will actively direct all functions of the District division. The main efforts, he explained, will go toward educating the public and the doctors to eradicate the stigma erroneously attached to cancer, to uncover cancer at its earliest possible stage, and to take advantage of the latest scientific aids to combat it.

Yesterday's grants, all providing continuing financial support to projects previously supported by the society include: Children's Hospital, $4180; Doctors Hospital, $7031.76; Garfield Hospital, $13,785.60; Georgetown University Hospital, $17,976; Instructive Visiting Nurses Society, $4193; Warwick Clinic, $22,890, and GWU School of Medicine, $20,000.

A 10-year-old Fairfax County boy lost part of his thumb and two fingers of his left hand yesterday when a cartridge exploded as he picked at it with a nail.

The youngster, in satisfactory condition last night at Arlington Hospital, is Clarence Wilmer Case, 1020 Cedar lane, Sleepy Hollow, near Falls Church. Doctors have not yet determined whether his sight was affected.

His mother, Mrs. Clarence Wilson Case, said she was sitting about six feet from the boy when the accident occurred at 9:10 a. m. yesterday.

"He was sitting in a chair in the living room," Mrs. Case said. "He was out of school because of a teachers meeting. I hadn't noticed what he was doing, when all of a sudden I heard an explosion. I heard him screaming that he couldn't see and then I saw part of his fingers were blown off."

The mother said Clarence Wilmer told her another boy had given him the cartridge at school. He is in the fourth grade at Oak st. Elementary School in Falls Church.

The boy's father, who was in the bedroom, described the explosion as "a terrific blast." The only shells he had in the house, he said, were hunting shells, which he keeps put away in a bag on a high closet shelf.

Arlington Hospital authorities said the boy, who is lefthanded, lost half his thumb and two-thirds of his index and middle fingers. He also suffered powder burns on the face, chest, shoulders, and right hand. Damage to his sight, if any, could not be determined since he was under anesthesia.

2 GIs Accused Of Raping Girl As 3d Stood By

Two 22-year-old Fort Myer soldiers were charged in Municipal Court yesterday with raping a 16-year-old mother while her date, another soldier, watched without protest.

Held under $2000 bond each on the rape charge were Pvts. Hoyt M. Jones and Edward Lee Jones. The onlooker in the alleged rape was Pvt. Eugene F. Wills, 19, also of Fort Myer.

The girl in the case is married but separated from her husband. She has a 7-month-old daughter.

She testified that she had a date with Wills in a Northeast Washington apartment Monday night and that the two Joneses arrived while she was lying fully clothed on the bed with Wills. She said she and Wills were "just talking."

She testified that Wills stood across the room while the others took turns assaulting her.

The men all denied that any force was used, and said the alleged victim's telephone number decorated the walls of Fort Myer buildings.

4 Cases Raise Area Total of Polio to 184

A 3-year-old boy of the 3200 block of Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, taken to Children's Hospital Monday and his case diagnosed yesterday, and a 9-year-old boy of the 4300 block of N. 4th st., Arlington, admitted to Children's Saturday.

Other cases were those of a Greenbelt woman, 27, admitted to Gallinger Hospital Friday, and a 3-year-old boy living in the 2600 block of Southern ave. in Prince Georges County, taken to Walter Reed Hospital Saturday from Children's Hospital.

The new cases bring to 184 the number of polio cases so far this year over Greater Washington. Here is the breakdown:

District, 79; Fairfax County, 14; Montgomery County, 26; Arlington County, 16; Prince Georges County, 43; Alexandria, 7.

It was erroneously reported yesterday that a 10-year-old boy living in the 700 block of E. Leland st., Chevy Chase, was stricken with polio last Friday while en route to New Hampshire.

The youngster, who is Montgomery County's twenty-sixth case, actually became ill August 21. He has recovered completely. His case was reported to county health authorities September 23. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Commissioner Mason Is Resting at Home

District Commissioner Guy Mason is resting at home this week on orders of his physician. The city official has not been at his office since Thursday evening, but is expected to return early next week.

He was seriously ill several months ago and his doctor feared pressure of duties might force a relapse.

Timetable Issued

D. C. to See Moon Eclipse Thursday

In the year 2049 it may be routine for a city editor to bark at a reporter:

But this being the year 1949, reporters, scientists and the general public must be satisfied with an earth-bound view of Thursday night's eclipse—even though the observatory of Georgetown University says it'll be more interesting to watch from the moon.

Eclipse Timetable

This is what will happen Thursday night, according to astronomers at the university:

At 6:50 p. m., the eclipse will enter its penumbra during which there will be a slight darkening of the moon's surface.

At 8:05 p. m. begins the umbra when the shadow of the earth begins to pass across and darken the face of the moon.

At 9:20 p. m. begins the total eclipse. The moon will be completely in the shadow of the earth but sunlight refracted from the earth's atmosphere will make it visible. It will appear in the heavens as a dim copper disc.

Total Until 10:30

The total eclipse of the moon will last until 10:33 p. m. The eclipse then will pass the umbra at 10:48 p. m. and the penumbra at 1:03 a.m.

One of the astronomers at Georgetown commented that an observer on the moon would see a much more brilliant display during the eclipse than observers will see on the earth.

On the moon, the earth would appear as a dull disc surrounded by a brilliant ring of lights which would sparkle in all the colors of the spectrum.

Senate Approves 60-Day Sick Leave For D. C. Teachers

The approval was given by accepting a joint conference report recommending adopting of the 60-day limit earlier voted by the House. The Senate at first had voted for a 90-day limit.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), sponsor of the 90-day plan, called the conference report up for final Senate action. It was approved without debate. The formality of House acceptance of the report is the final step required before the bill goes to the White House.

The bill would end the present system that makes sick teachers hire substitutes out of their own salaries.

Neely Group Session Cut Short Again; Man Lacking

D. C. Committee Head Says He May Give Call Every 4 Hours for Quorum

For lack of a member, Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) yesterday for the second time in a week ordered a jig-time adjournment of the Senate District Committee.

He adjourned the first meeting last Wednesday four minutes after the scheduled time. Yesterday it was over in three minutes. The reason for both adjournments was failure to muster on time the seven members needed for business. Last week five showed up, yesterday six were there.

The six were all there, including Chairman Neely, at 3:30 p. m., the scheduled time to start. More than a dozen bills were awaiting attention, including an increase of three judges for the Municipal Court, taxicab limitation, and insurance law revisions.

Two minutes passed. Neely sat quietly. Then Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), in an obviously prankish mood, half rose as though to leave, saying, "Well, if the meeting isn't going to start!"

Over in a Minute

He flashed Neely a grin and sat down, but Neely overlooked the joke and promptly moved toward his adjournment order. It was over in a minute.

"Let 'em come or stay out," he told his five colleagues. "I'm not going to impose on your good nature by waiting longer for those who do not arrive on time. The meeting is adjourned. There's no use to sit here and talk about it."

Senator McCarthy sought to salvage the meeting. "Matt, maybe we can go out on the floor and get some other members," he said. But Neely waved the suggestion aside. Later McCarthy told reporters he was all in favor of starting meetings on time.

During the 3-minute flurry in the committee room, J. George Stewart, minority committee clerk, was in the Senate chamber. Two committee members, Senators John J. Williams (R., Del.) and Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.), gave him word they would go to the meeting as soon as a third District member, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), had completed comments he was then making about the Administration farm bill.

Planning to Attend

Kefauver, too, was planning to attend, and a fourth member, Senator Bert H. Miller (D., Idaho), had said he would come if he could.

Later Neely told reporters that beginning Thursday he will start calling committee meetings every day, and perhaps every four hours, until he can get a quorum to the meeting on time.

Besides the District bills, several shifts in the District subcommittee line-up are awaiting action. The latter type of committee business can be handled by five members, it was pointed out.

Neely said he still counts on having the meeting before Congress adjourns.

Lauds Baptists

Evangelistic Drive Gets Hays' Praise

Representative Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) yesterday praised the evangelistic campaign now under way in 27 Greater Washington Baptist churches.

The organized effort to win commitments to the Christian way, he said, is "conserving the greatest value in human life."

"There can be no social stability, no permanence in our civilization, unless our people attend to the great spiritual demands" which are presented by such evangelistic campaigns, he declared.

President Truman and other Congressmen and Senators also have praised the effort, which has brought more than a score of Baptist preachers and song leaders to the city. The campaign began September 25 and will continue through this Sunday night.

The Rev. Dr. William J. Crowder, director of the Department of Missions of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, reported 383 persons joined participating churches during the campaign's first nine days.

Church school attendance on Sunday, he said, totaled 10,752 and more than 14,500 persons attended morning and evening services at the 27 churches participating in the drive.

Noonday services from 12:10 to 12:40 p. m. are being conducted at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1301 New York ave. nw., each day through Friday by the Rev. Dr. W. A. Criswell, pastor of First Baptist Church, Dallas, Tex., as part of the effort.

Progress in the use of radioactive elements in the war on cancer was described last night by Dr. Edward McCrady, Atomic Energy Commission biologist at Oak Ridge, in a speech before the thirteenth annual Parent-Teacher Institute at Lisner Auditorium.

The speaker described a case of thyroid cancer in which, despite removal of the entire gland, cancer cells were apparently at work elsewhere in the body.

Radioactive iodine was injected into the system, the iodine was picked up by the stray cells and then, by means of a Geiger counter which registers radioactivity, physicians were able to determine the exact location of the cells, McCrady said.

In addition the radioactive iodine has the same adverse affect on cancer cells that an X-ray mchine has, McCrady declared.

Would Increase Weapons

"If we can find something that can be concentrated in all kinds of cancer cells and not in ordinary cells, we can make it radioactive," the speaker said, and thus add more weapons to the anticancer arsenal.

In place of the expensive radium once widely used in cancer treatment "we now have a substitute in radioactive cobalt," McCrady declared, stressing the inexpensiveness of the latter element.

The delegates to the institute, which is sponsored by the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, were greeted by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University; Dr. Hobart M. Corning, District schools superintendent, and Mrs. A. J. Nicely of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

"The legislative process" was described in a brief talk by Floyd M. Riddick, Senator editor, Daily Digest of the Congressional Record. During the afternoon session, Hugh Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School, advanced a program for District parent-teacher associations to follow in improving the education of children.

He listed school health service, a lunch program, juvenile agencies and the school music program as examples of fields in which parent participation is needed.

Others who appeared on the program were Mrs. R. G. Radue, divisional representative who spoke as a parent, and George Murphy, 12-year-old son of Capt. William T. Murphy, 14th Precinct, who spoke for students.

The two-day training institute will wind up today

Dupont Circle Assigned to 2 Police Forces

Metropolitan and Park Police will share responsibility for law enforcement at the Dupont Circle underpass, the District Commissioners ruled yesterday.

In announcing this decision, the Commissioners approved an opinion on Dupont Circle policing drawn up by Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West at the request of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of metropolitan police.

Barrett's men will have the job of patroling the underpass except for the underground west side of the project, which is to be a roadway for through traffic. Park police will be responsible for this part, which is the only portion passing under the circle that is Federal property.

The approaches, streetcar platforms and streetcar tubes all are located around the outer circle, on or under District property.

In asking for the ruling, Major Barrett asserted that police protection would be necessary because of the "likelihood of holdups, pocketbook snatchings, and persons who may commit nuisances . . . The location—underground—lends itself to these temptations," he said.

Meanwhile, J. N. Robertson, deputy highway director, estimated yesterday that northbound streetcars will begin moving through the underground east tube sometime during the week of October 17.

Orwell Disputed In '1984' View of Staving Off Doom

George Orwell's "Nineteen Eighty-Four," a despair-ridden prevision of the last stage of collectivism, was reviewed last night at the season's first Critic's Forum, a symposium of Catholic thought on current best sellers.

After describing the atrocities committed in Orwell's semifictional Oceania, which insists on "a monopoly of power and the destruction of the human personality," the Rev. John S. Kennedy, associate editor of the Catholic Transcript at Hartford, Conn., disagreed with the author about the means of deflecting the modern trends toward collectivism.

Harvest Time Is Fair Time in Frederick . . .

The Washington Post

"THIS WAY TO THE MIDWAY"—The annual "Great Frederick Fair' is under way. Visitors have their choice of candy cotton, hot dogs, pink lemonade, thrills on various rides and watching the harness races and sideshows. The fair, staged on the grounds in the town of Frederick, Md., will close Saturday with a thrill show. Produce and cattle from Frederick County farms also are on display

New Spastics Test Method Shown Here

A new test to single out at the earliest possible age those victims of cerebral palsy who may benefit by present training means was exhibited here yesterday.

The test, being tried out at the District of Columbia Society for Crippled Children, was devised by Mrs. Lawrence E. Spivak, child psychologist, here.

A form perception test, it is conducted in pantomime to gauge the intelligence of victims of "birth injury," commonly called spastics. An estimated five to seven out of ten of these victims are now believed to be mentally normal, handicapped only by lack of muscular coordination, she said.

Present Tests Inadequate

"The tragedy," explained Mrs. Spivak, "is that at nursery age many cerebral palsy victims erroneously are thought to be feebleminded, and present standardized tests cannot pick out the educatable ones until they are four years or older, and then often only the mildly affected."

Implements for the test were included in a display of the D. C. Society for Crippled Children as part of a general exhibit at 1508 H st. nw. of District efforts towards rehabilitation of the physically handicapped. The exhibit is being conducted in conjunction with National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week.

Mrs. Spivak's test materials consist of such things as miniature chairs, balls, tables, marbles and like common objects. The children being tested are asked in pantomime to indicate, for example, which tray has the most marbles, which table has the broken leg, which chair is whole.

Hope to Gauge Capacity

By their responses, said Mrs. Spivak, we hope to be able to gauge their capacity to learn.

The Crippled Children's Society exhibit represents perhaps the youngest age level support of NEPH week. It is justified, however, by the fact that the society is engaged in a rehabilitation program seeking to develop the abilities of crippled children towards employability when they grow up.

D. C. Courts Ask $2.5 Million, 3d More Than Present Budget

Court officials here are asking for a fiscal 1951 budget of $2,572,700, almost a third more than estimated costs for the present fiscal year.

If the requests are approved by the District Commissioners and the Congress, Washington will see a vastly augmented Juvenile Court staff, including a statistical and research unit that will be able to conduct special research problems into the cause of child-crime in partciular areas of the city.

Juvenile Court: 1950 estimates, $286,486; 1951 requests, $391,600.

Municipal Court of Appeals: $90,664; 1951, $93,600.

Reimbursement to the Treasury for the District's share in cost of the Federal Courts here: 1950, $1,018,000; 1951, $1,425,000.

Most spectacular of the requested increases was offered by the Juvenile Court. It is requesting, in additional personnel, 16 persons in the social work division and 6 in the clerk's office.

Besides giving assistance in general work, the personnel would allow a statistical and research department. The justification given the Commissioners on this follows:

"The statistical research department would be responsible for providing correct data on the case load of the entire Juvenile Court and on each individual probation officer, and would be able to show the distribution of the volume of work by census tracts, type of complaints, race, sex, the flow of the cases through the various steps of the work within the court, recidivism, disposition of cases, interval of time involved in completion of social studies, frequency of interviews, etc.

"The work of this division would be infinitely important in establishing objective data for administrative action and formulation of new policies and procedures.

"In addition, this division would be able to carry out many special research projects in regard to problems such as delinquency in particular areas of the city, causes of recidivism, etc., which would not only benefit the community through the improvement of and redirection of work in the Juvenile Court, but would be important in the community through pointing out various objective data which could be utilized in the community to prevent juvenile delinquency."

Nonsupport Cases Up 42 Percent

In citing a general rise in cases handled by the court, the commissioners were told that the rapid rise in the birth rate recently, instability of postwar marriages, and breakup of families because of housing and economic factors have caused the cases of nonsupport of illegitimate and legitimate dependents to increase 42.2 percent in the last three years.

In all the courts, salary increases and personnel additions ate up the bulk of the requests, with outmoded equipment and services necessary, counting for much of the remainder.

In the Municipal Court, with its pannelled walls and soothing indirect ceiling lighting, it has been discovered that the illumination is inadequate for the "reading of small print" by judges and clerks. Three hundred dollars are asked for reading lamps.

He was a veteran of World War I and a member of Quentin Roosevelt Post, American Legion.

The only survivor is his wife, Mrs. Geneva E. Hobbs.

Mme. Raymond Dreux

Mme. Raymond Dreux, wife of the Commercial Counselor to the French Embassy in Washington, died at her home in France yesterday, the Embassy reported.

Parks Board Asks Money To Reorganize

That, in effect, is what it is asking with its request for $117,854 for fiscal 1951, as compared with its current $84,700 appropriation.

The commission, admitting its present staff is weak, asks changes in procedure followed when Gen. U. S. Grant 3d was chairman. General Grant resigned last spring after serving one full term. The commission wants to create the post of executive director to perform work done in the past by the chairman.

Chairman Lives Out of Town

"This procedure is no longer possible due to the out of town residence of the new chairman (Dean William W. Wurster, of Cambridge, Mass.) nor is it considered desirable to continue such a procedure."

In asking for a $34,593 increase in "personal services" during the 1951 fiscal year, the commission calls attention to the inability of its present staff to do the work.

"While it is representative of the different professional approaches inherent in any planning problem, none of the present personnel are backed by subordinates on the staff who can undertake the detailed studies and follow-up work which is a necessary part of any assignment."

The commission wants assistance in each of its three main functions—comprehensive planning, landscape design planning and research.

Plan to Be Published

It expects to publish its long-awaited comprehensive plan for Washington during the current fiscal year, but warns that the report's recommendations are "suggestive only and not detailed, and therefore require the preparation of specific plans."

The commission also observed that so far as regional thoroughfare planning is concerned, its own comprehensive plan will have "to be evaluated and perhaps adjusted to the results of the origin and destination survey." The commission wants additional staff for this work, because its present staff is of "insufficient size."

The budget request flatly states that Washington is lagging far behind cities of comparable size in its planning staff. It declares that few cities have planning budgets of less than $125,000, while cities "with the most progressive and active planning organizations" have $200,000 budgets or more.

Ky. Senator Moore Found Dead in Hotel

J. Lee Moore, 51, a Kentucky State Senator from Franklin, Ky., yesterday was found dead of a heart attack in his room at the New Colonial Hotel, 1156 15th st. nw.

Senator Moore's body was found by Clyde Watson, executive assistant to Senator Virgil Chapman (D., Ky.), when he knocked on his hotel door at 8 a. m. Senator Moore had planned a plane trip to Norfolk, where his daughter was awaiting a surgical operation.

Alarmed when his knock went unanswered, Watson secured a pass key from the hotel clerk and entered the room. He saw Mr. Moore's form lying motionless in bed.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death from natural causes after an autopsy showed Moore had died from a congestive heart ailment.

Police said Senator Moore had become ill shortly after midnight and a doctor had been summoned then.

Senator Moore was in town to confer with Senator Chapman. He planned to fly yesterday to Norfolk to visit his daughter, Mrs. Norman Duncan, hospitalized there.

Senator Moore's wife, Mrs. Carrie Conn Moore, was in Norfolk with her daughter.

When Stella and George Freemont returned home one night, they found their front door open. Alarmed, they both raced to their bedroom.

There, to their horror, they saw all George's shirts strewn on the floor. Stella screamed. George felt inside his pink shirt. He looked at Stella a long time . . . she understood . . . their life savings were stolen. "How did they know, how did they know?" wailed Stella.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Feels Emotionally Dead Toward Husband Since Receiving Information About His Recent Attentions to Younger Woman

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I, now in our forties, have been happily married for 15 years, although he has a free and easy-going temperament, while I hold stricter views, especially where love and marriage are concerned.

Four months ago I noticed a change in his manner toward me. Although as kind as ever, he seemed indifferent to some extent; also he would be late for dinner or miss it altogether, and he was staying away from home more. I had a feeling that something was eluding me.

Eventually I learned through an old and trusted friend that Matt was seeing a great deal of a young woman who was a client of his firm, for whom he had done some work; and that he was visiting her home and often staying until quite late at night. My informant, who casually knows the young woman, said the situation was hardly, or at least not entirely, Matt's fault, as the lady had actively courted his interest.

I decided to wait and observe the situation, althuogh I felt pretty badly and still am horribly hurt. Lately Matt has started to spend more time at home, but I find I've become emotionally dead where he is concerned. Knowing that he's been involved with another woman, I can't bear the thought of his making love to me.

Once since coming back he did make a conciliatory gesture along these lines, when I told him I knew what had been going on and that he had thereby destroyed the attraction he used to have for me. He didn't deny the circumstance but seemed surprised that I felt as I did; and things are now at a domestic impasse. No overt unpleasantness, just a sick situation that needs clarifying.

I know that marriage counsellors advise women to wait patiently for the return of an erring spouse and that all will be as usual again; but it doesn't seem that simple to me. In fairness to us both, should I continue our life together or seek a divorce? I shall be grateful for your views. B. B.

DEAR B. B.: Your attitude from the start of Matt's indiscretion until now seems to be that of a wife who hasn't positively loved her spouse for quite a long time, and now vindictively feels that she has "justification" for being frankly rigid and disobliging,—whereas until he went astray, she had been expediently humoring or passively permitting his lovemaking, or possibly trying indirectly to discourage that sort of thing without giving offense.

You state that when Matt began to seem somewhat indifferent, though as kind as ever, four months ago, you had a feeling that something was eluding you,—and I take it you mean that you were aware of the recession of positive interest on his part, without being able to account for it, until you heard the gossip about his offside adventure.

The fact that you "decided to wait and observe the situation" is evidence of a remarkably detached or singularly cool reaction to infidelity, it seems to me.

A wife significantly in love with her husband, whether with a passionate physical attachment or with special emphasis on comradeship of mind, would have found it impossible, I am sure, to "wait and observe"—as with eye to keyhole—in a case like this.

The passionately devoted wife would have raised a storm right off; and the other type, who values and cultivates friendship of spirit in intimate relationships, would have invited an honest immediate examination of the rift in unity, pointed up by gossip,—leaving open the question as to who (in the twain) was at fault, and what repairs should be undertaken "in fairness to both."

If Matt seems surprised at your sick resentment of his brief affair, does it mean perhaps that he long since assumed you didn't care "that way" about him? How much awareness or concern do you have—how much have you ever had—regarding what he thinks, feels, hopes, wants, needs, etc.? It seems to me you can't sensibly consider whether to stay together or seek a divorce until you better know yourself and him,—as a starting point from which to decide whether there are any "growth" potentials left in the relationship. M. H.

Tobé Says...

Slim Skirts Are Smartest

THE SILHOUETTE is in process of changing from full to slim, and the smartest new clothes certainly have slim skirts. The slim silhouette has strong Paris backing, too, but since fashions actually change very slowly, there are still many full skirted dresses including the popular pleated skirts.

The slim silhouette may be a slender column as in most suit skirts and in the new sheath dress. But more often it is broken by a spectacular drape like the famous Dior "scissors" dress and the "kite" drape of Desses. Or there may be a full overskirt or a tunic topping a slim underskirt.

THE five-day Alexandria Antique Show opened yesterday morning at the Recreation Center when Mayor Franklin P. Backus cut the blue and white DAR ribbons which blocked the door of the exhibit. John Alexander Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution is sponsoring the show. Pictured here are Mayor Backus, Mrs. C. M. Seaman, chairman of the show; Mrs. Alexander Doughty, manager of the exhibit; Mrs. Robert Duncan, cochairman; Mrs. Robert W. Wheat 3d, chapter regent, and Mrs. Everett L. Quaint Beauty Draws Throng

Alexandria Antique Show Opens

By Norma Lanum

EXHIBITORS came from as far as La Chute, Quebec, Canada, and visitors from as far as the West Coast, to the Alexandria Antique Show which opened yesterday at the Recreation Center, 1605 Cameron st.

The show, sponsored by the John Alexander Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will continue through Saturday.

Blue and white DAR Ribbons across the entrance to the show were cut at 11 a. m. to admit dozens of early comers to the affair. Alexandria's Mayor, Franklin P. Backus, clipped the ribbons and explained that proceeds from the show would sponsor camp scholarships for Alexandria children and benefit the local hospital.

Bouquets Bestowed

A bouquet was given the woman woman who came the longest distance to attend the show—Miss Lulu Perry Gunderson of Portland, Oreg. And another went to the honor guest of the affair. Virginia State Regent of the DAR, Mrs. Everett Lee Repass of Salem, a candidate for vice president general in the 1950 election.

Twenty-six antique collectors and dealers from all along the Eastern seaboard brought their most coveted items to the show.

Prize items in the collection of Queenie Davidson of La Chute were some framed pomade jar lids made of early Staffordshire ware by Fenton. Sharing the booth with Miss Davidson was Mrs. Jesse Turner, who had to move around with one leg in a cast.

Suffers Fall

MRS. TURNER brought her treasurers from Englewood, N. J., and unpacked them eventlessly. But while arranging them in the Recreation Center, she slipped and broke her leg. Her exhibit included a set of exquisite fish or dessert silver with mother-of-pearl handles.

A Charles Magnus view of old Alexandria dated 1864 was one of the rarest pieces on display. Owned by Miss Laura Reinhard of Washington, the view shows Soldiers' Rest, which must have been a retreat for the Confederate forces near the Southern Railroad that runs behind Duke st.

John Conover brought with him from Ossinger, N. Y., a collection of personal belongings of Mary Wells Cartwright whose husband founded Ossinger in the middle 18th Century. Among the pieces was a miniature tin mold for making birthday cake candles about the length of your finger.

A silk Turkish family prayer rug was shown by E. Semonian of Washington. In it were woven nine praying niches where members of the family might meet together in Mohammedan rites.

Also on exhibit were an early American toll plate warmer . . . an old pine cradle that had been transformed into a coffee table . . . a Cincinnati bar table with little cubby holes for the liquor glasses while you're playing blackjack . . . a grandfather clock a foot and a half high made in the early eighteenth century of Dresden ware . . . an 1824 leather fire bucket . . . and a set of wooden butter molds, each about the size of a package of cigarettes.

White House Plans No State Dinners, Receptions This Season

THE 1949-50 season at the White House includes no plans for state receptions and dinners. Repairs are still going on at the Executive Mansion, and the President and Mrs. Truman are residing at the Blair House, which is too small for large gatherings such as diplomatic and congressional receptions. It is expected the White House will be ready for occupancy January, 1951, but no social plans can be predicted for the 1950-51 season.

There are few places in Washington equipped for state functions attended by 1500 or more guests, and such buildings as the Pan American Union or National Gallery of Art, which are of suitable size, are used for other purposes during the day, and would require a great deal of adjustment.

The White House social season usually begins the first week in December and continues until Lent.

Mrs. Truman's schedule for the coming two weeks includes the dinner she and the President will give Tuesday, October 11, at the Blair House for Prime Minister of India, Jawaharlal Nehru, and the reception of the Daughters of Colonial Wars, which she will attend on the same day, at 4 p. m., at the DAR Chapter House.

Emily Douglas Exhorts Women Voters to 'Mix It'; D. C. and 5-State Leaders End Sessions Today

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

ALTHOUGH the League of Women Voters can be credited with a great many accomplishments, the organization also has its shortcomings, members were told yesterday, by Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas, wife of Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois.

Leaders of League chapters from the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia gathered at Pierce Hall for the first 12 regional meetings sponsored by the League to talk about how the voter can be made to realize his responsibility, not only in elections but in primaries.

The harshest criticism she has heard from friends of the League, according to Mrs. Douglas, was that the League's nonpartisan policy had a sterilizing effect on women in political work. "Some League members have used the League as an excuse for not jumping into the hurly-burly of politics," she said.

Must Blame Themselves

WOMEN who don't take part in primaries and the formation of of party platforms have no one to blame but themselves when candidates prove to be "sour apples," she said. Get acquainted with your own committeeman, she urged, go to the local meetings and eventually you even might offer your services as a candidate.

From this subject, Mrs. Douglas turned to the merits of the Democratic Party. It's the party of the people, she said, reminding the League members of President Cleveland's war on monopolies, President Wilson's reforms in domestic life and President Roosevelt's social reforms.

Mrs. Leona Rush, Montgomery County delegate to the General Assembly of Maryland, picked up the discussion from the Republican point of view. She, too, urged community participation in the political party by all voters. "You can keep the organization cleaner by working from within than from without," Mrs. Rush thought.

She stated that she resented having the Republican Party called the "party of the privileged" adding that since 1854 the party has been dedicated to the individual.

When she first went to Annapolis, Mrs. Rush said, she felt like a patriotic woman; when she returned she felt like a horsetrader. "Politics isn't pretty," she continued, "and it's too bad we have to have pressure groups. But they are effective and until the day when they will be obsolete, a letter to your Congressman does impress him."

Miss Anna Lord Strauss, president of the National League of Women Voters, advocated active participation in the primary work of the parties resulting in getting better candidates and representative platforms.

Unanswered Questions

DURING the afternoon session a panel of experts discussed the new League booklet, "What's the U. S. to You?" The 37-page manual is a quiz on politics that asks, but doesn't answer, political questions. Released yesterday, the booklet's purpose is to show the importance of starting at the "grass roots" in party politics and the importance of voters' participation.

Using the booklet as a basis, members of the panel of eight discussed party political work from individual viewpoints. Dr. Merrill Hartshorn, of the National Education Association believes that schools must produce good citizens with a "know how" to act and teachers must be able to instruct in national as well as local affairs.

Walter D. Myers, University of Maryland student, pointed out that in the student assemblies of colleges, first hand experience in student elections and primaries can be gleaned to be used later in local and national elections.

C. T. Anderson of the Railway Labor Political League said he believed in not only getting the voter to the polls but following the candidate through his term of office and making him adhere to the platform on which he was elected.

Miss Venice Spragg, representing the National Council of Negro Women, charged that officials don't want women to vote their own convictions but would rather tell them how to vote. She was saying "Certain entrenched interests want to tell you how to vote, and that includes the labor unions . . ." when her words were drowned out by the audience applause.

John Gunther of Americans for Democratic Action stressed the need to take sides on all issues, in order to have a good, honest and efficient government.

Mrs. Arthur L. Ransohoff, the author of the booklet, said the questions were in the League manual but the community would have to supply its own answers.

The leaders in the League chapters recessed following the afternoon session to return this morning for the finale of the four-session meeting.

Ohio Fans See Bill Veeck Opposing Taft; Romanian Anti-Red Leader Mourned

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THINGS LIKED LATELY: The small black velvet afternoon hat with twin sprays of paradise jutting horizontally worn by Senora de Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador. . . . The ermine cape Mrs. Robert Olds wears late afternoons . . . The rumor that Bill Veeck, majority stockholder in and president of the Cleveland Baseball Club, may be pushed into the political arena to rival a no less imposing statesman than Senator Robert Taft? Veeck, called "The Golden Boy" because hair, heart and everything he touches turns to gold, has an amazing grip on the imagination and affections of millions of Ohioans. He'd give the good Senator quite a run for his money . . . The gastronomically amazing buffet spread at the Mayflower wedding reception of Princess Tawhida Halim and Frank Rediker. Plates smothered in truffled aspic, thin sliced ham curled into flower-like cornucopias, pink and white "eggs" of chicken Jeanette and pate de foie gras, all nestled in a sea of jelly near a fancied-up pineapple—sculptured melons—a "mountain" made of tinted bread, with tiny walks winding to palm treed summit up which tramped "flamingoes" fashioned of seashells—the princess' coat-of-arms done in red, blue and silver—a mammoth five-tiered wedding cake—everything so beautiful that no guest dared "touch"; only waiters and white-capped chefs could bear desecrating such exquisite handiwork.

Brilliant Anti-Red Passes

FOR the past five years self-exiled Iron Curtain country political leaders have been an interesting phenomenon in Washington's international kaleidoscope. The death in New York of Grigori Niculescu-Buzesti is the first break in their ranks. Mr. Buzesti, who was condemned to life imprisonment in absentia at the 1947 farcical Bucharest purge trials, was titular head of the National Peasant Party, Romania's majority anti-communist faction.

Grigori Buzesti avoided a similar fate by escaping in January, 1946, to join his critically ill wife in Switzerland. His wife, a daughter of Romania's famous statesman, the late Prince Barbu Stirbey, died a month later.

The son of a professor, Buzesti's intellectual keenness seemed enhanced by lingering illness. He died at 42 and had suffered from lukemia for seventeen years. His last political post was that of first Foreign Minister after the 1944 coup d'etat which placed his country, according to national inclination, on the Allied side. As exile he headed Romanian political affairs in this country and was a founder member of the International Peasant Union. So far Buzesti's successor has not been decided upon.

The Foxes of N Street

LAST Sunday Lyttleton Fox, whose house at 3019 N st. is for sale, advertised it. The newspaper ad extolled the Fox chateau's Georgian elegance at some length and made it sound just as plush as it really is. The notice added that the house would be open for all-day inspection.

However, a tiny slipup occurred somewhere along the line. Instead of 3019, the address was printed as 3109. As the Sabbath wore on and no one showed, Mr. Fox re-perused the notice, detected the error. Curious, he sauntered to the address given, found it was the Washington West Baptist Church where a series of lectures on a pertinent subject "The Road to Salvation" were being given by a Dr. Fox! Since it was unlikely possible purchasers could straighten out the tangle, Mr. Fox became so interested in Dr. Fox that he decided to attend the lecture.

Collection of 80

Heiberg Fans On Exhibit At Emile's

By Marie McNair

IF YOU'VE joined the groups that form constantly at Emile's window on Connecticut ave., you've probably wondered where he found that collection of 80 magnificent fans.

Well, now the secret's out. Mrs. Alf Heiberg, who remodeled Federal House at 33d and O sts. in Georgetown, unearthed them recently from an old trunk. They've been packed away for more than a decade along with memories of Manila days, and Paris nights.

Louise Heiberg, once the wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, immediately thought of giving pleasure to others. She called Emile, who's been doing her hair for a quarter of a century. Would he like them for his window? Would he? Most certainly yes! Of the fans she treasures most are several from Mrs. Quezon, widow of the Philipine President, who never forgot a birthday. One that's particularly beautiful is spread like an eagle's wing ranging from the palest to the deepest pink. And another is fashioned of the gorgeous feathers of a bird of paradise.

Several of the most valuable fans in her collection came to her via the auctioneer's gavel when the estate of Mrs. Heiberg's mother, the late Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, was auctioned off by court order a year or two ago.

When Louise Heiberg lived in Paris back in the days of World War I she acquired a coquettish little number behind which the cold bright eyes of Marie Antoniette once shone. It's gone now, whither, Louise Heiberg can't say, for it remained with her mother until her death.

Home Freezer Booklet Issued

To answer the many questions families ask about home freezers, a new Department of Agriculture bulletin entitled "Home Freezers —Their Selection and Use" is just off the press. The bulletin is based on recent studies of home freezers made at the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics.

The bulletin (MP-687) may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D. C., at 10 cents a copy (coin or money order, not stamps). Orders for this bulletin should not be addressed to the Department of Agriculture.

Though this publication was written in response to demand from teachers, extension workers and others doing educational work in household equipment, it gives the facts which the man of the house and his wife are likely to want before buying a freezer, as well as advice on thrifty use and care.

About Removing Brass Finish

Will you please tell me the best method of removing the finish the manufacturers put on brass handles on furniture reproductions so they can be polished? Brass polish is not enough in some cases. L. R. G.

This sort of finish is usually a lacquer which can be removed easily by wiping with alcohol.

I made a double batch of relish, and having so much I let it sit in a galvanized bucket and I also simmered it along with vinegar spices, etc., in the same container. Now it has a peculiar taste. Is there something I can do to save the relish and would it be harmful to eat? N. S.

I would strongly advise against using the relish in any way. Foods, especially those containing acids, should never be cooked in galvanized utensils.

On page 197 of the May 1949 issue of Better Homes and Gardens magazine there are illustrations of dining chests with built-in tables. Can you tell me if there is a store in Washington which sells these chests or where I can obtain one? A. B. G.

A furniture store on Connecticut ave. has the high boy which opens to a table as illustrated in Better Homes and Gardens. They do not, however, have the dinette chest-table combination. The store can be reached by calling District 7262.

Listed with the article in Better Homes and Gardens are the names of the manufacturers of these chests. To get the name of the store in this area selling the dinette chest, I suggest you write to the manufacturer.

I should like to know how to clean the stains on a marble fireplace. I have tried ammonia, scouring powder, etc., all to no avail. Please give me some helpful hints. F. W.

If this is a deep stain you may have to try several methods before it is completely removed. Start by sprinkling one of the wall and paint washing powders onto the stain and rubbing it with a stiff brush. Unless the stain has penetrated the marble, this should remove it.

Another method which sometimes gives good results is to rub the marble vigorously with putty powder and a little water. Putty powder is a mild abrasive, but will not remove the shine.

Still another method is to use a household bleach. Saturate a heavy cloth with bleach and lay it over the stain. It is most effective if you can arrange some way to leave the cloth over the stain for several hours. If the stain is on the vertical part of the fireplace, apply the bleach by making it into a paste by adding corn starch. Spread it thickly on the stain. Leave until dry. Repeat, if necessary.

Is there anything one can put in an apple pie to prevent the juice from overflowing in the stove while baking? W. D.

Placing two tablespoons of minute tapioca in the bottom of the pie before the apples are added will absorb the juice as it is extracted from the apples and help to prevent running over.

Here are some other ways to prevent overflowing:

1. Make the top crust an inch larger than the pie pan and tuck the extra top crust under the outer edge of the lower crust before crimping the edge. This forms a perfect seal which will not let the juice seep between the two crusts.

2. Use a pie tape around the outer edge of the pie. This tape is sold especially for this purpose and can be purchased where kitchen gadgets are sold.

3. Reduce the oven temperature to 325 degrees after the 10-minute initial browning period. By cooking the pie at a lower temperature, the juices boil more gently and do not boil over.

How can I remove rust stains from a tile floor? W. D.

Most rust stains can be removed by scouring the tile with fine steel wool. If this isn't completely successful, bleach the stain away by using a household bleach. To apply, wet a heavy cloth with a half-and-half solution of the bleach and water and lay it over the stain. Let remain for 20 minutes. Repeat, if necessary. If the tile is colored, do not let the bleach solution stand on it, but sponge the spot with it. Rinse thoroughly.

One on the Aisle—

An English Film Assays 'Average'

By Richard L. Coe

"THE WEAKER SEX," at the Playhouse, is a gentle, not especially original picture about a British family during the past four years. It is well acted and raises a question in the minds of the audience which its writers are too restrained to ask.

Who won that war, anyway?

Here you have a charming widow, her son, daughters, sons-in-law and her suitor. They survived the lonely year when England stolidly stood alone. They gave all they could during the war, and three years of peace still find them coping with life as best they can.

This is not easy material for a film. Esther McCracken, who wrote those two slight comedies, "Quiet Wedding" and "Quiet Weekend," has adapted this from her play, "No Medals," but, though using some of the tricks of Noel Coward's "Cavalcade" and a few of Jan Struthers' "Mrs. Miniver," she lacks the dash of the former and the humor of the latter.

It is the sort of picture which may give comfort to her countrymen and at the same time baffle those of us in rich America, inclined to enjoy our material inheritance and to forget the year Mr. Churchill calls "Their Finest Hour."

The story is largely devoted to how those years looked to a mature woman who has not forgotten the days of her youth in World War I. Her 1944 duties at a port canteen, the ever-pressing problem of how to shop for a varied menu, the anxieties of D-Day, the air raids on a Channel town, the dread, fateful appearance of buzz bombs over the south coast, the exhilirations of VE- and VJ-Days, the birth of a grandchild, the loss of a son-in-law and the housing problems are the trials she lives through.

"THE WEAKER SEX." Eagle Lion release produced for J. Arthur Rank by Paul Soskin. Screen play by Esther McCracken and Soskin from a play by Miss McCracken. "No Medals." Photographed by Erwin Hillier. Directed by Roy Baker. Music by Arthur Wilkinson. At the Playhouse.

For the Ladies

Ursula Jeans has the role of the mother, a more restrained, less fanciful Mrs. Miniver than Greer Garson introduced us to, but one of those fine characters whose very normality makes dramatization of the average so difficult. A celebrated star of the London stage, she gives a considered, able portrayal.

Cecil Parker, whom you'll recall as the doubting colonel in the last of those Maugham stories in "Quartet," has a far less juicy role. Simply a quiet, understanding man of mature years and mind. The others are able in their sympathetic roles, and if the excitement of average living in doughty Britain has understandably evaded Miss McCracken and her screen collaborator, Paul Soskin, the heart is in the right place. As the ladies, to whom this will mean something, will understand.

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S touring graduate group, the University Players, will act their version of "Much Ado About Nothing" tonight at the Sacred Heart Auditorium, 1625 Park rd. . . . An open date between Northern engagements makes possible this quickly-arranged performance, which should be widely welcomed by all anxious to see the group off on its 7000-mile tour to 81 towns and cities . . . Tonight's curtain is at 8:30.

TO BE A MEMBER of Ethyl Manning's Columbia Opera Company seems to assure one's self of a mate . . . In the company presenting Gounod's "Faust" in English Friday and Saturday nights at Lisner are three couples, married or about to be, after the propinquity of chorus rehearsals . . . Shirley Bachman and Allan Aehle were married October 2, Rose Westaferro and George Dobbs last month, and on November 10 Corrine Echols and Jimmy Anderson (Wagner in "Faust") will take their vows . . . Miss Manning isn't surprised . . . During the past 12 years there have been 25 marriages between members of her casts.

WALT DISNEY'S newest arrival opens at Keith's this morning and it looks like the Old Master . . . Those who've relished Kenneth Grahame's "Wind in the Willows" will find that charming yarn the finale of the double-barreled film, narrated by Basil Rathbone . . . Bing Crosby, in the first half, sings and narrates Washington Irving's Ichabod Crane adventure . . . So Disney logically calls it "Ichabod and Mr. Toad."

Citizens Ask Express Buses On Freeway

A record-breaking meeting of the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association last night voted to ask the Capital Transit Co. to run rush-hour express over Whitehurst Freeway to the MacArthur blvd. area.

The 139 persons present at the meeting in the Palisades Fieldhouse, Dana and Sherrier pl. nw., an all-time record attendance, asked the transit company to split the proposed express into two sections—one to run on downtown K st. and the other on Constitution ave. The action was unanimous.

President Robert R. Hershman reviewed the history of the association since its founding in 1916, and awarded 15 past presidents certificates of appreciation. Another feature of the meeting was an illustrated lecture on the history of Washington transportation from 1800 to the present. The lecture was given by Fred T. Colwell of the Capital Transit Co.

Columbia Heights Indorses Seckinger

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night indorsed Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger as District health officer to succeed Dr. George C. Ruhland, who retired last week.

The association, meeting at the Columbia Heights Christian Church hall, also went on record in support of the recently submitted police and fire department budgets, but opposed any increase in taxes.

Dickman Reelected In Cleveland Park

The North Cleveland Park Citizens' Association last night elected J. B. Dickman, jr., president for the 12th consecutive time.

Meeting at Hearst School, Tilden st. nw. between Idaho ave. and 37th st., more than 50 members also chose the following officers:

Wilbur A. Gallahan, vice president; Mrs. T. A. Allison, secretary; and William A. Howes, treasurer. Named delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations were Dickman and Milton A. Harper.

Dickman and Paul A. Waring were selected, in addition, to represent the group on the Northwest Council of Citizens' Associations.

Petreys Face U. S. Tax Liens For $196,000

Notices of tax liens totaling more than $196,000 were filed in District Court yesterday against Eugene D. Petrey, photo studio executive, and his estranged wife, Dorothy, a juror in the 1944-45 sedition trials here.

The Collector of Internal Revenue in Baltimore charged that Petrey owed $93,946.83 in income taxes, allegedly delinquent in the years 1942-1946. He charged that Mrs. Petrey, now living in Las Vegas, Nev., owed $102,465.88 for a similar period.

Petrey, who lives in Merrifield, Va., is an executive of the Goldcraft Portrait Studio, 716 13th st., nw. He is visiting in Atlanta, Ga., and could not be reached for comment.

The Petreys were divorced in 1947, after Mrs. Petrey charged her husband with assault and then refused to prosecute the case in Municipal Court.

Largest delinquency charged for both came in 1943, when the government charged, he failed to pay $48,407.73, and she failed to pay $48,973.73.

Arlingtonians Oppose Area Tax Agency

Creation of a metropolitan area agency for coordination and planning of tax legislation and other matters of general regional planning operations was opposed last night by the Arlington Civic Federation, meeting in the Lyon Park Community House.

Such an agency has been proposed by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) in a bill now before Congress. The bill calls for the formation of a nine-member commission—three members each from the District, Maryland and Virginia.

A report of the legislation and legal action committee of the federation said "there seems to be no purpose in considering tax matters in the metropolitan area, so far as can be seen, except to impose a sales tax on Virginia.

"It was pointed out that the Inter-Federation Council had appointed a committee to seek the establishement of a regional public utilities commission.

The Civic Federation in a resolution declared that Sasscer's bill does not serve this purpose.

The group heard Arlington School Superintendent William A. Early declare the "only way to get things you want is through taxation."

Early said that the services rendered by the community are "in direct proportion to the amount of finances put into the services."

Edmund D. Campbell of the Arlington Community Chest told the federation members of the need for a successful Community Chest fund drive in Arlington. He said that Arlington's goal for the drive, which will begin October 27, is $60,000.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

TOKYO: Four baseball games are being played this afternoon, by Japanese workers during their lunch-hour, on the grounds of the imperial palace. But it is difficult to determine whether this trespassing is indicative of the democratization of the Japanese or of their astonishing absorption in baseball—or both. Workers in traditional black jackets and clogs lifts practice curve-pitching on every street in Japan. They're good defensive players, but can't hit a long ball. Even the Japanese Diet has two ball teams, one for the upper house and the other for the lower. In both squads the Communist deputies played left field.

Even the Tass correspondent, Egorov, has become a baseball fan, and at night, when the hill-top Soviet Embassy turns its spotlight on the hammer and sickle—the only floodlit flag in all Japan—Egorov calls at the Correspondents Club to find out what baseball games are scheduled for the next afternoon. He saw the game between teams representing Keio University and the American correspondents, in which a Japanese baserunner spiked the American first baseman, then bowed, tipped his hat, apologized and started walking off the field—until the umpire startled him by calling him safe . . . It was Egorov, incidentally, who accepted congratulations on the day it was announced that Russia had an atomic bomb. "Did you know about it before the announcement?" he was asked . . . "No," he said. "My job is to know what's going on in Tokyo, not in Moscow."

When General MacArthur first settled in Tokyo and was asked when he planned to go home, he told some members of his staff: "I'll go home when I can fly back in one day." A few hours before our Pan-American Stratocruiser landed at Haneda Airport, where the United States Army's brass-band greeting was "The Apple Song," No. 1 on the Japanese hit parade, General MacArthur was told that the California-Tokyo crossing would be completed in less than 24 hours of flying time. "Uh, uh," he said. "Maybe I spoke too soon" . . . One veteran correspondent, incidentally, in discussing MacArthur's departure from Japan said: "General MacArthur will be succeeded by general amnesty."

A Japanese industrialist who accumulated $30,000 could find no hiding place he considered safe enough. He therfore had it cemented onto his living room door, against the day when currency controls will be lifted.

Parent Representatives

One of the most successful practices in the P-TA is that of having room representatives, grade mothers or parent representatives as they are variously called.

The idea is a simple one. For each grade in the elementary school a parent (or perhaps two) is selected. The job of this parent is to act as a representative both for the parents whose children are in the grade and for the teacher who is in charge of the group.

When grade meetings are to be called, the representative takes major responsibility in getting parents out. If there are criticisms of what is happening at school, she attempts to deal with the problem. Where this is not possible she sees that it gets proper consideration by teacher or principal.

A variety of other functions may be carried on. In one school, the grade representatives made an inventory of all the kinds of things parents of that school might be able to do to help. They listed hobbies that could be shared with children, indicated which parents had traveled and described the particular skills or information that other parents might be called upon to contribute.

If there isn't a system of parent representatives in your school, why not find out whether it can be developed?

What's the Verdict?

JOHNNY KICKS MARY

Q. Johnny and Mary sat across the aisle from one another in school. One day, after class had been called to order, Johnny kicked Mary lightly on the shin. It was a kick which ordinarily would have caused no harm, but it happened that Mary's leg had previously been injured, and that Johnny's kick, slight though it was, was sufficient to aggravate the injury into permanent lameness. In the ensuing suit for damages, it is conceded that Johnny meant no harm. Is he liable?

A. Even though Johnny had no intent to do harm when he kicked Mary, he nevertheless was violating the decorum of the school when he did so. He was committing an unwaranted—indeed an unlawful—act, and the intention to commit an unlawful act must be imputed to him. He committed an unlawful battery on Mary, and is responsible in damages for the aggravation of her injury that his unlawful act caused.—F. L. D.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

With the Lipstick Off, How Will You Know Which Is Which?

We seem to have overlooked one thing in our discussion of lipstick on restaurant glasses, and Mrs. M. Ryan of 300 Belle View blvd., Alexandria, Va., sums it up like this:

"When your glass has lipstick on it, you know it hasn't been thoroughly washed, and you send it back.

"But when there's no lipstick, you don't know whether it's been washed or not. Maybe it would be a good idea to mark all glasses with lipstick—and then they'd have to wash them."

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Amy B. Goldstein of 3800 Massachusetts ave. nw. apologizes for not getting the name and number of the hacker, so that we can patronize his cab next summer, but listen to this:

He's rigging up an air conditioning unit that will keep his car comfortably cool all through our worst heat waves.

There's a project for Detroit to work on. If they perfect it, a lot of us will sleep in our cars.

IT'LL SOON BE TIME FOR "NOTARY SOJAC"

Many of you who don't listen to the radio in the afternoons probably didn't hear Bill Holman's explanation of "Notary Sojac" on my program yesterday.

Bill draws Smokey Stover, whose antics in the Sunday Washington Post invariably include that mysterious "Notary Sojac" sign. Many readers have asked me to find out what it means.

Bill's answer was: "It means 'Merry Christmas,' in Gaelic."

If you didn't know that before, don't feel too bad about it. Also on the program was Lank Leonard, who is as Irish as his favorite character Sheriff Finn—and Lank didn't know it, either.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I'm a New Yorker, but I wasn't rooting for the Yankees. Or the Bosox, either.

I'm a Nat fan, because with those big clubs, it's a battle of checkbooks. Baseball started out as the National pastime, but it's gotten away from its original conception.

I prefer Griff's method, of developing players, rather than buying them.

If there should be a passage of checks between the Nats and the Yankees, and the current Yankee team were to appear in Washington uniforms next season, would we then root for Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich?

Harry Traub,
2743 Lorcom lane,
Arlington, Va.

Dear Harry:

I would. Wouldn't you?

But right now I'm busy rooting for my Wondrous Bums from Brooklyn to moider them Yanks.

Bill.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Taffy-colored 5-month-old pup whose two young masters are off to Greece." (Falls Church 8217.)

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder if the "Lizzy Stone League for the Abolition of Long Skirts" will disintegrate with the new fashions, and become a militant force opposed to raising hemlines?

PERSISTENT TYPE

College registrations were supposed to drop shortly after the war. But don't bring up that subject in the presence of George Washington University's Director of Admissions Harold G. Sutton. Chances are he'd laugh at you.

On a recent Saturday afternoon, employes of the admissions office worked overtime to try to catch up with a bumper crop of applications.

Students who tried the door found it locked and barred. But one young man was not to be dissuaded by such a minor obstacle.

Temporarily rebuffed, he withdrew to reconnoiter. Then, noting that the lights were on, he took the direct approach, and entered through the window.

"Turned out to be a very affable chap," recalls Director Sutton. "Said he hadn't had a chance to use commando tactics since the war. We told him to come back Monday."

ADD DEFINITIONS

Jay Aitch observes: "A pessimist is a person who has to live with an optimist."

REBUTTAL

The other day I got a poem from a regular contributor. It contained an error I couldn't correct without fouling up the meter. So I sent it back, pointing out the mistake, and suggesting that perhaps a slight change might salvage the rhyme. By return mail I got this:

Gol-dang it, Bill, it's things like this
That make me wonder why
I've lived to be so dad-blamed dumb
And still kept gettin' by.
They oughtta back the wagon up
And haul me off some night.
Just file this with the trash because Dan Webster's always right.

RUSS YOUNG THE ELDER

Earl Godwin, NBC commentator, collects rare old books.

At Lowdermilk's the other day he came across a copy of "Around the World With General Grant," by John Russell Young. Publication date: 1879.

The author was Russ Young's uncle—the father of Engineer Commissioner Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young.

Lewis Grip on Miners Less Secure

By Drew Pearson

Word inside labor circles is that John L. Lewis' dictatorial control over his United Mine Workers is the shakiest it has been since the 1933 depression year, when the union would have folded up but for the rescuing hand of Franklin Roosevelt—whom Lewis later repaid with hate.

Lewis

There is growing dissension among rank-and-file miners, who were barely able to support their families during the recent three-day-week work schedule—much less maintain an all-out strike with empty larders and no pay checks.

And the fact that Lewis continues to draw his $50,000 a year, ride around in big limousines and put up at the best hotels while negotiating with the operators doesn't set well with the rank and filers.

The high esprit de corps and loyalty to the "old man" that marked former walkouts is missing this year. One reason is the large number of World War II vets in the UMW—independent young fellows who won't be pushed around by anybody, even John L. Lewis.

The strongest rank-and-file grumbling among the mineworkers is over the dissipation of their pension and welfare fund. This was manifested when a Pennsylvania miner, G. H. Livengood, brought suit against Lewis for alleged mishandling and waste of the welfare fund.

Livengood's action in itself is a telltale barometer of changing sentiment among the miners. For, in the past, no mere miner would have dared challenge Lewis' one-man rule. He and his family would have been ridden out of town by Lewis' strong-arm men.

Sour Southern Miners

Several UMW district leaders in the South have actually talked privately of breaking away to organize a separate union of Southern miners—if Livengood's charges of wasting the welfare fund are upheld in court. Also, many Southern miners are sore because Lewis makes a practice of settling with Northern operators first, thus getting Northern miners back to work ahead of Southern miners. In addition, Southern miners are weary of being kept broke by Lewis' annual strikes.

Just once, they would like to see him wangle a wage increase without a walkout.

It was kept quiet, but miner delegations from western Kentucky and Nicholas County, West Virginia, braced Lewis' right-hand man, John Owens, in Bluefield, W. Va., the other day with a demand that the UMW treasury be opened up to help destitute mine families.

In a surly mood, leaders of the two groups told Owens that they were broke and their families hungry.

All this is why the coal operators, for once, are not pressing for a quick settlement, and also why Lewis abruptly terminated his strike in the anthracite and Western coal fields.

Capital News Capsules

Alaskan Defenses—Most vulnerable link in our Alaskan defenses is housing. Right in the heart of a great timberland, the Army Engineers haven't been able to build enough housing to accommodate United States troops. Living quarters are so short that the Army and Air Force can't even keep a minimum peacetime force in Alaska. Even today, housing space is urgently needed for 12,543 men and 6973 dependents . . . One trouble: It's costing the Army Engineers half as much again to construct houses and barracks as it would cost private builders.

Less Air Joy-Riding—Publicity over free airplane rides has turned out to be a boon to the commercial airlines. Several Government officials had planned to take Air Force planes to the Kansas City shindig honoring Democratic Chairman Bill Boyle. But, after all the hullabaloo over free rides, not a single Air Force plane showed up. Some Democrats grumbled that "Drew Pearson is costing us a lot of money."

More Russian Agents—The Justice Department is getting ready to tighten up on Amtorg, the Russian government trade agency in the United States. Evidence has developed that at least half a dozen Amtorg agents have been spying in the United States; so the Russian government will be asked to register all its members. The State Department may block the move, however, on the grounds that it will make relations with the Russians even tougher.
